1942-43, a year when Carolina helped fight the war

A Challenge

*M*EN marched where boys had strolled before.

That brief sentence holds the history of this year at Carolina.

It is true, true in every syllable. Hammered by the challenge of the times, boys changed to men, casting aside youthful frivolity, taking up with grim determination the burdens that only a man's stout mind can conquer. Where saddle shoes had lackadaisically shuffled along shady walks, the rhythmic beat of a military tread now raised the dust.

We rose with the sun to meet eight o'clock classes and it was a new sense of duty to nation and to self that pulled us from beneath warm blankets to hurry forth in the hush of a chill dawn. And we rose at football games when the national anthem was played. It took on new meaning.

It represented a bond with the fellow from across the street or from the room down the hall who was fighting on the sands of Buna Beach or at the approaches to Tunis and Bizerte.

And we sacrificed. Gone was the Chapel Hour or "Bull Period," the mid-morning respite that had been a Carolina tradition for generations. No longer did sun, coke and chatter warm light-hearted students as they basked on the steps of South building.

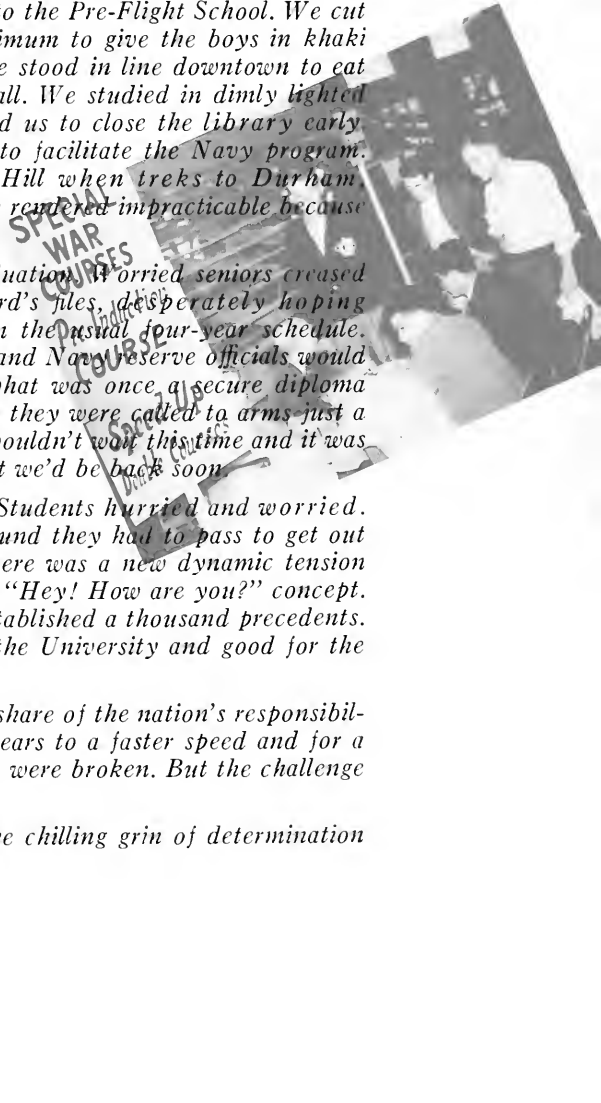

And we did more than sacrifice. We shared and cooperated. We moved in with the three fellows across the hall when the University needed the room that we had held for years. We took phys. ed. in the morning, in the early afternoon—at any time convenient to the Pre-Flight School. We cut our Saturday night dating down to a minimum to give the boys in khaki down in our old quadrangles a chance. We stood in line downtown to eat when the Navy took over our dining hall. We studied in dimly lighted classrooms when a shortage of labor forced us to close the library early. We played mural games at night in order to facilitate the Navy program. And we spent our week-ends in Chapel Hill when treks to Durham, Raleigh, W. C. and points homeward were rendered impracticable because of overcrowded transportation facilities.

Then there was the rush toward graduation. Worried seniors creased many an anxious brow over Central Record's files, desperately hoping that another quarter could be shorn from the usual four-year schedule. Draft boards were uncompromising; Army and Navy Reserve officials would wait for no graduation; and many saw what was once a secure diploma slip sickeningly beyond their grasp when they were called to arms just a few months too soon. The victory train wouldn't wait this time and it was off to the wars with a grin and a hope that we'd be back soon.

Much of the spirit of old was gone. Students hurried and worried. Parties were fewer because party boys found they had to pass to get out before they were caught in the draft. There was a new dynamic tension that took the place of the old, easy goin' "Hey! How are you?" concept. It swept a hundred traditions before it, established a thousand precedents. But it was a tonic; good for us; good for the University and good for the nation.

Carolina was not content to hide its share of the nation's responsibility behind academic robes. It shifted its gears to a faster speed and for a while many of the cogs clashed and a few were broken. But the challenge was met and conquered.

Where once was careless laughter, the chilling grin of determination was fixed. The University went to war.

*T*HIS YEAR at Carolina has been different—the glamour of college life faded as hard work hit us with a bang. Study schedules were speeded up, the War College made its appearance, and the rah-rah days on the Carolina campus as we had known them before, were gone for the duration.

The war got tough, draft boards got tougher, and the end of each quarter saw more of the fellows with whom we've studied and played leave for more serious business. But even as our war program gained momentum and the Tar Heel blue and white became red, white and blue, there were enough of us imbued with the fun-loving spirit to keep Carolina fairly much the five-ring circus that it had always been.

Those of us who saw little chance of staying in school long enough to earn our diplomas vacillated between buckling down for a last try, or cramming enough fun into our days and nights to last us for the long fight we had ahead. The race was a close one and we had to work and play harder and faster. And so the tempo of life at Carolina hit a new high.

Many memories of our last year will later come back to us—the endless gloomy Monday mornings after a week-end that was too big, the long fall when we waited for a victory over Duke, the hours of physical education and the obstacle course, the futility of trying to study in the Library at night, the booths at Marley's and Harry's, Professor Smith's "1:30 lab," the hours we spent in registration lines, conferences with our deans, the urgent letters from the draft board back home, the last farewells as we dragged our suitcase toward the bus station.

Hill”

But no matter how or when we left, some day each of us would find the way back to Chapel Hill.

To the MEN IN SERVICE

*E*VEN before the treacherous storm broke over Pearl Harbor a year and a half ago, Carolina men began to drift away from our campus in a steadily increasing stream to fight for the global supremacy of what they enjoyed in Chapel Hill—Lux et Libertas, Light and Liberty. Thousands of Carolina students and alumni are now training in a hundred camps and fighting on a dozen battle fronts. In the hope that they may return to enjoy the ideals which they are fighting to preserve, the 1943 YACKETY YACK is dedicated to Carolina's Men at War—and to Victory.

CLASSES took up too much of our time, we thought. What with cut probations, we all had to attend most of the time, but some of us never saw the inside of the Library—and wished that we had.

ACTIVITIES, playground for the BMOC's, brought those with lots of ambition to Graham Memorial, where socializing, coke-drinking and rivalries seemed to take up more time than work.

REMEMBERING Pearl Harbor, we look back on a year when our boys departed en masse for the draft boards and enlistment offices, and Carolina began to look like Fort Bragg in miniature.

OUTSTANDING in their studies, the boys who make the honorary societies deserve more credit for their work than the rest of us, but surprisingly enough, you'll notice that few of them are intellectual fanatics.

LIVING the Carolina way, with lots of laughs and fun, football games, dance week-ends, bull sessions, politics, beer and cokes, uniforms, Pre-Flight cadets, even a bit of studying now and then.

INTERFRATERNAL life brought many of us into a little circle of snobbishness, others into close friendships which will last long after we leave Chapel Hill for a job or the Big Fight.

NIGHT LIFE suffered little from the war, as Carolina men had a last fling with their buddies, coeds, and imports; a far cry from the U. S. O. dances and officers' clubs of the next few years.

ATHLETICS, emphasized as preliminary war training, built muscles and coordination, put us in shape for the days when speed and strength will mean the difference between life and death.

“Will You Remember”

*F*ROM the castle-crowned height at Gimghoul, dominating the coastal plain that stretches east toward the ocean, to the close-knit block of Greek social houses on the west, lies the campus where we have worked and played during our years at Carolina. Giant oak trees and smaller maples shade the walks and wide lawns on which we have trudged and pedalled, lounged and loafed, on our way to classes, the Library, Graham Memorial, Kenan Stadium, and a coke at the “Y”.

Long after we leave Chapel Hill, will we remember the Confederate soldier who never fired as the coeds walked by; giant Davie Poplar, ivy-covered and gnarled; the moon rising over the Bell Tower as we sauntered toward the Library to hit the books; the roaring, uniform-studded crowds which filled Kenan Stadium on a November Saturday; the tangled Arboretum, thick with muffled voices while the stars winked down.

“.....And Later Return.....”

*P*ERSISTENT in our memories, but not so beautiful, will be the muddy obstacle course where we slipped and slid for Uncle Sam; the paper-strewn dorm or fraternity rooms where we climbed over chairs, books, and bottles towards a beckoning bed and those elusive hours of sleep; the angry, wind-whipped trees as we filed through the gray rain to a winter quarter 8 o'clock class.

“.....To Old
Chapel Hill?”

To those of us who stay in school will come back the recollection of our last spring on the Hill —when we lolled on the grass or strolled about the campus, increasingly aware of the sound of marching feet around us. For we would soon leave the peace of Chapel Hill for the determined and noisy hub-bub of the many service camps throughout the country, and then on to stake our lives on the battlefield, that the beauty and peace of a thousand Chapel Hills might never again be threatened.

“DR. FRANK GRAHAM, Our

President”

NOTHING is considered settled at Chapel Hill until Frank Graham gives it his own unique touch. This is just, because he is head man, but not oppressive, because he always translates authority in terms of democratic freedom. It is fruitful because he never fails to open fresh vistas in any situation. It is delightful because he is lovable and elicits Christian charity as the constructive way for persons. His genius in the personal field is total; a rag picker or the President are to him nothing less nor more than persons. His technique is that of teaching. His influence runs through Chapel Hill, the Consolidated University, the General Assembly, the State, and more and more throughout the Nation. Clashing interests, in his method, become cooperating persons.

His process is Nature rising to Spirit. He is as alert to practical opportunity as a Syrian peddler, infinitely patient of detail. He is hard as a rock on moral principle. He is orderly as the stars in intellectual analysis and synthesis. He is instant as the lark on the wings of his imaginative theme—a world more economically productive, more socially satisfying, more spiritually beautiful.

Like Spirit he can be in two places at once. His work goes well in Washington and in Chapel Hill. His office is open and hospitable; his light still shines on Sunday nights for freshmen. His handshake grips the needs of the person present and the values of all persons everywhere.

DEAN ROBERT B. HOUSE.

DEAN ROBERT B. HOUSE

“I MADE a mistake, plain and simple. I exceeded my authority. And I want everybody who cares about it to know it. I am correcting that mistake,” is a remark made in the case of a certain “cause celebre” by Bob House, to more than one person this year.

This forthright admission indicates the admirable strength of character of the man who heads the University Administration. Since Pearl Harbor he has squarely met the multiplied duties which have come to his executive office without cringing or evasion.

Just as the Dean’s qualities of character have commanded respect and confidence, his warm humanness have won him wide affection. He loves good food, a melodious harp, enjoys home and good friends, admires lovely women, relishes a good joke, worships at the shrines of Shakespeare and Milton, loves the soil and the farm like a true son of Halifax County.

He has about the same love for “appeasers” as have Carter Glass and Douglas MacArthur.

Just as is true of Roosevelt and Churchill, the Dean acts when action is needed. If he takes the wrong road, he is the first to admit it; he just turns to the right and presses ahead. He has even secured action out of the most recalcitrant, word-slinging faculty meetings.

Greatness of character, of heart, of idealism, of dreams and of courage are characteristic of the Dean of Administration—respected as a leader, cherished as a friend in a host of communities from Manteo to Murphy.

DEAN FRANCIS F. BRADSHAW

REARED in a Presbyterian manse, Dean Francis F. Bradshaw stands as the restless, fearless, dynamic exponent of democracy and education in action in all phases of Carolina life.

Rarest and greatest qualities of THE TEACHER are his: brilliant intellect, genuine scholarship, vast and profound learning, amazing ability to impart facts, ideas and inspiration synchronously to his students—who bear spontaneous testimony that he is without a peer among their mentors.

Far ahead of his confreres, he diagnosed the demands and adjustments with which a warring world challenged the University; even though few shared his prophetic vision, he planned, exhorted and slaved until Carolina "went to war."

DEAN ROLAND B. PARKER

ROLAND PARKER, in the three short years since he came to the University from Darlington, has risen from General College Adviser and Social Science Instructor to Dean of Men. Actual friend to more individual students than a campus politician can call by name, he has never turned down a request for help or advice. By his interest and work he has become a sine qua non in student government. His intense devotion to his job has made him essential to a University at war.

THE DEANS OF THE

ALLAN WILSON HOBBS

Dean Hobbs, Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences and Professor of Mathematics, is perhaps best known for his sympathetic help in untangling schedule difficulties and for his love of hunting and fishing. On his shoulders rests the responsibility of keeping up with some 1,100 juniors and seniors who major in one of the liberal arts or sciences—and he does a good job.

CECIL JOHNSON

Taking over as Dean of the General College in this most difficult year, Dean Johnson has had the task of keeping tabs on every under-classman in the University. In addition, Dean Johnson has been the conscientious and hard-working advisor to the largest group of advisees in University history. Though he teaches both American History and Social Science, he has found time to be both an ardent baseball fan and family man.

DUDLEY deWITT CARROLL

Dean of the School of Commerce, Head of the Department of Economics, and Professor of Economics, Dean Carroll is also President of the Board of Trustees of Guilford College. Not content with founding the Commerce School, he has watched it grow, under his guidance, into one of the "toughest" schools on the campus and one of the best undergraduate schools in the nation.

WILLIAM WHATLEY PIERSON

Dean of the Graduate School and Head of the Department of Political Science, Dean Pierson finds time to give several courses in political theory. His intense interest in Latin American relations has led him to lengthy visits to South American nations; and while in Venezuela summer before last, he was made a member of the National Academy of Venezuela. He is now writing a history of that nation.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL

SUSAN GREY AKERS

The School of Library Science, one of the smallest schools on the campus, is nevertheless one of the best; and the work of Dean Akers has been responsible in large measure for its success. Her energy, patience, and perseverance command the respect of her students, and have become as much a part of the school as has she, herself.

WALTER REECE BERRYHILL

Until this past year, Dean Berryhill has been Director of the Infirmary and Assistant Dean of the School of Medicine. With his elevation as Dean of the School of Medicine he continues to be one of the hardest working men on the campus. He has inaugurated this year a plan whereby medical students at the University may receive clinical training.

ROBERT HASLEY WETTACH

With the School of Law since 1921, and former Assistant Attorney General of North Carolina, Dean Wettach was elevated to the deanship in Manning Hall only last year. Interested in his students and well-liked by them, he is Professor of Constitutional Law and Torts in addition to his many duties as Dean.

JOHN GROVER BEARD

A crack horseman and one of the foremost men in his field of study, Dean Beard heads the School of Pharmacy and is Professor of Materia Medica and Pharmaceutical Latin. A firm believer in pharmacy as a profession, he is particularly interested in encouraging the growing of drug plants on a commercial scale here in North Carolina.

Board of Trustees

THE members of the Board of Trustees are elected for terms of eight years. Their tenure of office is so staggered that one-fourth of their number is elected every two years. The Board has final authority in all matters concerning the University.

Members are:

JOSEPH MELVILLE BROUGHTON,
Governor, President ex officio of the Board of Trustees.

CLYDE ATKINSON ERWIN,
Superintendent of Public Instruction, member ex officio of the Board of Trustees.

ALEXANDER BOYD ANDREWS,
Secretary of the Board.

Alumni Association

THE General Alumni Association maintains a Central Alumni Office at the Carolina Inn in Chapel Hill, with a full-time staff headed by Executive Secretary Maryon Saunders. The Association and alumni, who comprise its membership through organized channels, engage in a year-round program which promotes meetings of alumni in many places both inside and outside the State; sponsors a regular schedule of class reunions at Commencement time; publishes a monthly magazine, The Alumni Review, which is sent gratis to all dues-paying members; helps build good will for the University among the public generally; keeps current and up-to-date mailing lists and information concerning more than 30,000 Carolina alumni; and in general conducts a program designed to help further the prestige and influence of the University of North Carolina and its alumni. In this work every former student of the University is invited and encouraged to participate.

U. S. NAVAL PRE-FLIGHT SCHOOL

THAT'S RIGHT, MATE, THE GROUND IS HARD.

COME ON, SAILORS, LOTS OF GRUNT AND GROAN.

*I*N THE spring of 1941 a giant exodus began from the Upper quadrangle; the Navy had arrived.

Chosen as one of the four Naval Pre-Flight schools in the nation, the University began reallocating students and preparing for inevitable changes. Taking over ten dormitories, the Navy dispatched officers and planning crews to Chapel Hill to prepare living quarters and facilities for the cadets.

The school is now operating at a prescribed peak of 1875 men, coming from all parts of the country and participating in the greatest physical toughening program that our armed forces have ever attempted. Under the leadership of Commander O. O. "Scrappy" Kessing and since last fall headed by Commander John P. Graff, the school has made vast strides towards becoming the finest in the nation.

Because of increased facilities needed in the vast program, a new athletic field has been layed out, and a modern hospital complete with the latest developments in scientific medical apparatus has been constructed

COMMANDER JOHN P. GRAFF

Unique at the Pre-Flight school is the V-5 instructors' training branch and a course in the identification of planes. Officers of the school have stated that Chapel Hill is proving to be an ideal location for the biggest and best Pre-Flight school in the country.

for the cadets. After the war, all buildings and physical education utilities will revert to the University, which has contributed substantially to the building costs.

W. D. PERRY, HEAD OF THE BUREAU OF WAR INFORMATION, HAS DONE A CAPABLE AND AGREEABLE JOB OF PLACING CAROLINA STUDENTS IN SUITABLE POSITIONS IN THE ARMED FORCES.

T. H. EVANS, UNIVERSITY CASHIER, HAS LONG HELD THE DIFFICULT JOB OF BEING A BUSINESSLIKE BUT UNDERSTANDING COLLECTOR OF STUDENT FEES.

"They Stood Out"

HENRY MOLL
SYD ALEXANDER

BERT BENNETT
BARRY COLBY

TAKING over the directorship during a year of widespread dislocations, Henry Moll has worked endlessly to succeed in making Graham Memorial a fraternity house for all the campus, a student union in every sense.

This year—as in no other—Bert Bennett has achieved his aim of guiding our Honor System to an increasing degree of perfection.

Far from his BMOC days, Syd Alexander returned this summer to help solve a tricky and delicate housing problem.

President of the Intertown Council, Barry Colby did an excellent job in organizing the fifteen hundred students that moved into town when the Navy moved into the dorms.

DR. REX WINSLOW

*B*ILLY CARMICHAEL left a lucrative seat on the New York Stock Exchange several years ago to come back to his Alma Mater as Comptroller. Since then he has guided the University through a period of critical financial anxiety. Called invaluable by the administration and the Navy, he has done top-notch work in consolidating friendships for a beleaguered University.

REX WINSLOW, fast-talking, cracker-jack economist brings to his classes a freshness and clarity that his students do not forget. As much as any teacher, Winslow has pointed the way to students confused on a war-gearred campus.

A refreshing, exhilarating professor, he keeps his classes above the usual hum-drum level. Students may never know what is going to happen next, but they keep coming back expectantly. Burdened by no pedagogical illusions, Winslow knows and likes his students—and they like him.

Because he has been a stimulus both in his actions and his chats, DR. EDWARD J. WOODHOUSE deserves a real place on this page. His classes—held out-of-doors whenever possible—have been termed “easy” by many, but they have made a more lasting impression than many a fact-filled memory course.

Always ready for a chat, always ready to recommend the book you want, always up to the minute on everything from world-affairs to the chances in the game with Duke, Dr. Woodhouse has been the “ideal college prof” in every sense of the word.

BERT LESTER BENNETT

MEN'S STUDENT

OFFICERS

- BERT LESTER BENNETT President
JAMES STEVENSON PECK Vice-President
IRA SAMUEL GAMBILL, JR. Secretary-Treasurer

“LONG on perspiration and short on acclamation” might well be the epitaph of this year’s Student Council. Headed by efficient, energetic Bert Bennett the Council started its year’s work early in the summer sessions and then went on from there to compile an enviable record of achievement.

Hard work and plenty of it was the Bennett key to success as the Council set about the mammoth task of acclimating each new student to the Honor System and the Campus Code.

Working through the extensive freshman orientation program, the Council started its indoctrination campaign before the new men had time to settle into University routine. Countless letters had been written during the summer months preparing counselors and freshmen alike for what was to come.

Small groups of new men were brought up before the Council each night during the fall quarter until every man in the freshman class had been thus contacted. All ramifications of the Honor System and the Campus Code were explained, test cases were utilized to show the methods of the Council and questions were encouraged.

During the first regular session of school, following the orientation program, an almost incredible drop in the number of freshmen brought before the Council for infractions was observed. So successful did the program appear to be, that it was expanded to include transfers from other schools who had entered the University in the upper classes. Once again a notable decrease in violations occurred, and the Council decided to exert its influence to see the system perpetuated in Carolina student government.

Much along these same lines, the Council attempted during the year to cooperate with the Faculty-Executive Committee in seeking to effect a complete understanding of the Honor System between student leaders and faculty members. A great deal of constructive work was done in adjusting new men to conditions laid down by the University examination plan.

For the enlightenment of the general student body typical cases were aired through the medium of the Daily Tar Heel; critical estimates and comments were welcomed by the Council.

With the continuation of this publicity, started last year, and the complete development of the orientation program, the doors to the Council chambers were further thrown open to the students with the result that Mr. Average Student is at last beginning to realize the constructive work that is taking place within the highest student governmental organization at the University. As things look now, this understanding is leading to an appreciation which in time should be reflected in a thoughtful and intelligent exercise of the franchise in the annual election of men to the Council.

RUSHING enthusiastically into the very thick of the confusion that every newly founded governmental organization may expect as its first heritage, the Women's Government Association finally came to age this past year under the leadership of Marsha Hood.

Organized in the spring of 1941 to complement the tri-cameral men's governmental set-up, the WGA consists of an Honor Council, whose function is purely judicial; a Coed Senate, whose function is purely legislative; and an Interdormitory Council, which is designed to regulate and supervise all aspects of coed dormitory life.

Profiting by the natural mistakes made by the "pioneers" of '41, this year's WGA leaders have gone ahead to build a substantial superstructure on the solid foundation that was left to them upon the graduation of last year's officers. Ironing out the kinks in the reorganized groups, the Association has carved for itself a considerable niche in student affairs. The testing period appears to be over and the permanency of the WGA assured.

The Honor Council completed a year in which it attained a laudable reputation in coed eyes. Ever mindful of the individual needs and problems of those girls coming before it, the Council was successful in treating all cases with impartiality and with a fine regard for the welfare of the women involved.

Besides enforcing the Honor System and Campus Code and interpreting the Coed Constitution, the Council has as its duty the enforcement of the ticklish Coed Privileges Agreement—always a sore thumb in intra-campus relations. Test cases for the enlightenment of the coeds were released from time to time, and a determined effort was made to cut down on the number and severity of infractions.

The Council kept abreast of the times by going on record as favoring an earlier curfew for coeds on Friday night and was given a notable vote of confidence when the measure was passed by an overwhelming majority of the women students in a special referendum.

Perhaps the most important contribution made by the Council was its work in setting up a comprehensive orientation program designed to reach each coed on the campus. This addition to the general program of the WGA resulted in every new girl's coming before the Council in a small group to be informed of the working of the Honor System, the Campus Code and the Coed Privileges Agreement. A significant decrease in the number of cases coming before the Council has spoken eloquently for the success of the plan.

ONCE a campus plaything to be kicked around at will by politically interested parties, the Student Legislature has at last come to assume a role second to none in the administration of the affairs of the student body.

Expanding yearly as the lusty child that it is, the Legislature is just now beginning to realize the extent of the tremendous power vested in it by the student body. During the year past this student assembly acted quickly and decisively on all measures pertaining to the welfare of a student body in war time, proving that democracy can take the field prepared for instant action in time of stress.

Any visiting students or faculty members who made weekly Wednesday night excursions to the Di Hall in anticipation of a tempestuous legislative session were seldom disappointed. The fire and brimstone that have come to be expected of Student Legislature meetings were anything but lacking as interest and enthusiasm within the group reached a new high.

To the list of Legislature immortals add the name of Speaker W. J. Smith. Rustic, humorist and capable leader, the "Reverend" led his flock to a more complete understanding of campus problems and the solutions thereof.

Other personalities included insurgent Sim Nathan, who forced an unsuccessful referendum of the dance bill; Harvey Hamilton, Law School representative who asked for a wartime suspension of the Carolina Magazine; Willie Long, conscientious, long-winded chairman of the Ways and Means Committee; Roy Strowd, chairman of the Finance Committee and self-appointed "whip-lash" over the only sizeable political clique in the body; Billy Britt, most out-spoken member of the assembly; Sara Anderson, most dynamic coed representative and the possessor of liberal ideas in relationship to the future of student government; and Lem Gibbons, stalwart, impassive chairman of the Rules Committee.

Most important business transacted by the body concerned itself with the reduction of the percentage of the student body necessary to pass a legislative act. Lowering the figure from 50% to 25%, the Legislature was thus instrumental in placing the reins of student government in the hands of an interested minority. Other measures of consequence were pending at the time of this writing.

Entrusted with control over the finances of almost every student organization on the campus, the Legislature bids fair to become the most powerful student control group ever seen at Carolina.

LEGISLATURE

INTERDORMITORY COUNCIL

*T*HE hardest hit of student governmental agencies by Chapel Hill's war transfiguration has been the hitherto powerful Interdormitory Council.

The shake-up caused by the Navy's use of ten of the University's 15 dormitories has presented difficulties to the Council that have proven to be well nigh insurmountable. The good natured banter that used to swing back and forth between the Lower and Upper Quads is gone, and in its place has come an alarming decentralization that has served to destroy much of that unity that previous councils have spent so much time and effort in creating.

This year's Council, under the leadership of Moyer Hendrix, concerned itself primarily with the creation of a solidarity between the residents of Old East, Old West, Steele, B-V-P, Smith and Carr. In this work the Council was aided by the University administration and the intramural department.

Always a problem in the past, the Council once more had to deal with the necessity of maintaining order in the dormitories. Crowded rooming conditions made the solution of this difficulty imperative, and as the year progressed the work of the Council showed results.

The old enigma of fostering dormitory spirit was once again the bugaboo of the Council as dormitory residents caught some of the wave of wartime indifference to student activities that was sweeping the campus. Competition was once again utilized to stimulate interdormitory rivalry, and the movement met with a reasonable degree of success.

The Council once again was instrumental in helping both the community and the campus in all of the various aspects of social welfare work. The group once more cooperated with the Red Cross, the N. Y. A. and, in addition, the newly founded Community Chest drive.

JULIA MEBANE President

ONE of the vastly underrated organizations on the campus, the Women's Interdormitory Council has yearly made a definite and lasting contribution to the welfare of the woman student living in one of the four coed dormitories.

Headed by Julia Mebane, the Council was particularly active during the past scholastic year. A number of successful social functions with the Naval Pre-Flight School were sponsored, coed participation in extra-curricular work was encouraged and a Red Cross drive was carried to a successful conclusion. Permanent changes in social rules were recommended to the Coed Senate, and study rooms in the various dormitories were furnished and painted through the efforts of the Council. In addition the Council, comprised of dormitory presidents and sorority managers, made an effort to insure whole-hearted cooperation with the intramural program and has helped to better relations between sorority and non-sorority girls.

WOMEN'S SENATE

OFFICERS

DITZI BUICE Speaker
 MARY JANE McCASKILL Speaker pro-tempore
 MARTHA GUY Secretary

GROWING yearly in importance, like its Student Legislature counterpart, the Women's Senate took another stride this past year towards becoming the most potent governmental organization in the revised WGA set-up.

Presided over by forceful Ditzzi Buice, the Senate built on what had been left to them from the preceding year and then went on to take the initiative in sponsoring radical changes in coed government at Carolina. Typical was the measure passed cutting down on coed dating hours to meet a wartime studying need.

Other notable work included a continuation of the Women's Officer's Training School, a revision of coed visiting privileges, the early passing of the budget, a further elaboration of the coed extra-curricular point system and the publication of a booklet designed to aid new students in their orientation to women's government at the University.

BARRY COLBY

GROWING directly out of the housing problem created by the influx of the Pre-Flight School and the resulting exodus of students from the dormitories in to the private homes of the community, the Inter-Town Council, established in the fall quarter, has come to take its place as an integral part of student government at the University.

Inspired by the thought and work of Dean Williams in the spring of '42, the Council became an increasingly important group in the eyes of the campus.

Led by Barry Colby, the Council faced a tremendous task of organization at the beginning of the year. Representatives had to be placed in the Student Legislature, the community had to be divided up into voting districts and, most important of all, a spirit of unity had to be developed among the bands of isolated students who lived all the way from the "sultry lowlands of West Durham to the icy steppes of East Greensboro."

The Council was helped in this work by the cooperation of the Tar Heel and Carolina cooperatives and the help of the three professional fraternities having houses out in town: Delta Sigma Pi, Kappa Psi and Phi Delta Chi.

The Council numbered among its accomplishments the organization of a comprehensive social program for town students, and a determined effort to improve town-campus relationships.

In addition, the Council threw its full weight behind the campus war chest drive and was responsible for a thorough canvassing of town for Sunday Night Session talent.

THE YEAR 1942-43 has seen many changes in the Carolina that we had known in years gone by—changes which were welcomed by few, but realized by all as necessities in a University at war.

By the end of the winter quarter the campus was beginning to take on the appearance of a glorified service camp in miniature. The Navy was everywhere, with its new buildings and use of classrooms left vacant by departing students. The new army established the NROTC as a permanent feature of the new Carolina. Motivated by patriotism and the desire to keep its doors open, the University virtually turned itself over to Uncle Sam for the duration.

The War College rapidly took shape and candidates for reserve commissions became militarized with uniforms, service pay and class schedules designed to make them officers in the armed forces. Many of our professors left for the forces. Students departed in droves, and soon it would seem that only the lame, the halt, and the blind would be left—and even they were as anxious as the rest to do their part.

Only the coeds remained in full force, and even their enthusiasm for college as usual waned, as they saw the men (and potential dates) disappear.

But in spite of the new face that Carolina assumed, there are still many of the old aspects left—the week-ends, less expensive but just as much fun; the varsity teams, strengthened by the eligibility of freshmen, carrying the Blue and White to more victories; the fever of student activities in Graham Memorial; and the last dates and parties before we too abandon gray flannels for blue or khaki. Some day there will be college as usual again, but not until Carolina has accomplished the greatest task in its history—to help win the war.

were regarded by many of us as one of the necessary evils of college life, by a few as the means of grabbing one of those gold Phi Bete keys and a good job after graduation. No matter how great or small our thirst for knowledge, cuts were limited, and most of us made the effort to meet classes, if only to keep up our self-respect.

As the year wore on, we got used to hearing that infernal alarm clock sound off before the street lights were turned out. A quick shave or a dab of make-up, a snack to eat, and we were off through the early morning chill to battle those eight o'clock nightmares. And so on through the day, stopping perhaps for a quick coke between classes, and wishing the old ten-thirty social session at the "Y" hadn't been cut out.

And then, as the one o'clock bell sounded, we all dashed to the nearest eatery to ease the pangs of hunger that usually made that last class so agonizing. After lunch we adjourned to Prof. Smith's "one-thirty lab" at the Carolina or Pick, loafed down for a quick slide around the obstacle course, or even sneaked into the Library for a stab at the books.

We headed for the Library after supper if nothing better offered itself, but usually spent more time looking at other people there than at our books. Finally we sauntered home, threw our books on the desk and hit the hay with a last despairing moan about the prospect of the next day's intellectual fight. And so to sleep . . .

"Hey, Joe, cut off that d—— alarm clock!"

“WE KNEW THEM IN 1942-43”

*O*N THE following pages you'll find a gallery of the coeds and boys we've known this year—the Tar Heels of war-beset Carolina. You'll recognize the students and the party-boys, the BMOC's and the small fry, the glamour queens and the activity girls, the fellows who lived in Marley's and those who hung out in the Library. But however you type them, they are all Carolina Tar Heels—the students whom we met in our classes in '42-'43.

Senior Class Officers: STEVE KARRER, Student Council Representative; CRAIG PHILLIPS, Vice-President; JINNETTE HOOD, Secretary; ROBERT SPENCE, President; "FROSTY" LONG, Treasurer.

Senior Class

*N*OW THAT our last spring has rolled around, the remnants of the once-crowded Class of '43 will soon march down to Kenan Stadium to shake the Governor's hand and receive their diplomas, the reward of four years of periodic studying. Back in 1939, we came to Chapel Hill over 900 strong, but the war has sadly depleted our ranks, and now perhaps half our number will be able to achieve their final goal. Even those of us who finally won the sheepskin will have to put aside our sports coats and flannels for Uncle Sam's G. I. uniforms within several weeks of our departure from the campus.

Some of us will recall the long hours that were spent boning in the Library or in the lab, the night we received our Phi Beta key, the energy we put into extra-curricular work down in Graham Memorial. Others will remember Marley's, the afternoon show, the week-end parties and excursions to W. C. and St. Mary's. But however we spent those four years, we all look back on them as wonderful.

Our first two and a half years here were the typical college years so greatly publicized, with lots of laughs and a dash of studying now and then. But midway in our junior year, the war shocked some of us out of our lethargy, and since that time, the members of the Class of '43 have filed through the doors of the enlistment offices and recruiting stations in a steady stream. Many have come out ready to don their uniforms at once, but others have joined the reserves in the hope of finishing their education before being called.

Those of us who are still left can think back on the many times when we have yelled ourselves hoarse for a "Carolina victory." And now as the Class of '43 goes forth, almost to the last man, to join the fight, its members are out for another Victory—with a bigger cause in mind, but with the very same spirit we showed in Chapel Hill.

Junior Class...

CAME our junior year at last, and those of us who had coasted through the first two years of college on our earlier education found ourselves faced with a bigger task now. Gone were our genial general college advisers, and in their place we found deans who seemed to want a little more studious endeavor than we had been accustomed to putting out.

More than the usual number of us chose the sciences as our major field, and were later thankful when it appeared that war industry would later grab us instead of the local draft board. Others entered the forbidding portals of Bingham Hall for a tough struggle with accounting, statistics, and the like. Many threw their lot in with sociology, languages, or political science. At any rate, we were now all beginning the period of training which would make or break us in later life.

We found that there was something different about being a junior. We had lost our freshman fright and sophomore cockiness. We felt almost grown up, and the real leaders in our class began to make their appearance, after two years of petty underclass rivalry and jockeying for political position. Best of all, we found ourselves with a new group of classmates—the co-eds who joined us, hundreds strong, from St. Mary's, W. C., Stephens and elsewhere, eager to catch our eye and make a name for themselves in the classroom, on the dance floor or in Marley's. Some of them made us step lively to keep up with them in the struggle for campus leadership.

As the war began to make it appear that none of us would ever graduate, we made a rush for V-7, the Army Enlisted Reserve, V-5, or the Marine Reserve. Before the year was half over, we were looking forward to a regulated college life, complete with service uniforms, special courses and base pay. But many couldn't avoid the draft board, or finding patriotism pushing education into the background, dropped away from the Class of '44 to enlist.

At any rate we plowed ahead, seeing less of social life and more of lab, getting less letters from the girl at home and more stamped with the government seal. We all looked forward to the day when, in War College or not, the Class of '44 would reach the last lap as seniors.

“Some Junior Personalities”

IN MEMORIAM

Lyman Clayton Higdon, Jr.

Franklin, N. C.

Vice-President of the Class of 1944, who met an untimely death in the summer of 1942. Respected and liked by all who knew him he was a credit to his class, to Pi Kappa Alpha, his fraternity, and to the University as a whole.

CLASS OF '45—caught up as freshmen in the tide of war that swept over the nation after the catastrophe at Pearl Harbor. The University's own "war babies" to whom Selective Service meant a determined, and often unsuccessful, fight with local draft boards to remain in school.

There were many who fell by the wayside; who left Chapel Hill's shaded walks to tramp in the stifling dust of Army camps while making their way surely toward the theaters of combat.

Those of '45 who were left behind are pictured herein. They are the naval reservists, those with occupational deferments, those with physical disability and those with beneficent draft boards. It has been their task to carry on in the name of the host that has left.

The sops of 1942-43 are a different lot from the cocky, carefree crews of second year men who preceded them. Ordinarily the college sophomore is in an enviable position. His initial period of adjustment to university life is over. He is, to his own mind, a seasoned veteran of three quarter's experience and for that reason a person of some consequence to be respected by the freshman class beneath him. He has a year in which to determine which academic paths he shall choose to follow. He has ample time in which to set curricular and extra-curricular goals before him and opportunity enough to direct his efforts toward the winning of a coveted Monogram sweater, a Phi Beta Kappa key, an important publications post or inclusion into one of the University's respected honor societies. He finds that his sophomore year, in a sense, can be called his "farewell to youth." Responsibilities are light, obligations are few and contacts are such that life becomes something to be enjoyed.

The Class of '45 has been forced to forego that privilege. Their second year has been one of rising to meet eight o'clock classes, of concentrating on studies designed to help them play their part in the war effort, of making themselves physically, spiritually and mentally fit for the tests of fitness and stamina that lie ahead.

Let it be said to the everlasting credit of our sophomores that they have tried to play the game right up to the limit in the face of serious obstacles. They have worked when duty demanded work, they have played when play was possible but, above all, they have proven that the college sophomore can cast aside the traditional rights, and customs of a second year university man and successfully meet the challenge of a wartime world “War Babies”

THE MEMBERS of the Class of 1945 will always remember their first year in school at Carolina as the year America entered the second World War.

Many of the men who first came to Chapel Hill a short two years ago are already gone, drawn up in the maelstrom of battle and strife. Many of those who were shy, smiling freshmen getting their initial impressions of life at college now are studying in a greater school—the army way.

The depleted ranks of the “War Baby” class are evinced in the far smaller number of pictures appearing in the sophomore section than did in last year’s freshman spread. A class of more than a thousand can no longer muster a roll call of half that number—and the remaining few, like the boys in the picture above listening with avid interest to the story of army life as told by a meteorology student, will soon be leaving for the armed services. Most of those who are left are taking military training here on the campus, some in the NROTC and others in the CVTC.

But the war will be over, and returning classmates will be able to point with pride to the part played in the final victory by the Class of '45.

Freshman Class

SEPTEMBER, 1943, almost a year after Pearl Harbor, and the village witnessed the annual mass immigration of University freshmen. In many ways this class resembled those which preceded it. The same inane questions were asked, the same mad week-end dash for Woman's College, home and Durham; the same hopeless feeling of bewilderment at the immensity of it all; the same enthusiasm at Tar Heel football rallies; the same all-night bull sessions on women, politics and fraternities and the same hope in each heart that Chapel Hill would hold something just a little different and distinctive in store for each newcomer.

Yet, in many respects this call was different. The fellows were younger, more determined to get an education, more cognizant of the responsibilities of a generation at war. They cheerfully bunked up three and four in a room, they talked long and seriously with advisers over taking courses aimed at fitting them for professions vital in the war effort; they played and worked with a fervor not seen at the University since the pulse-quickening days of 1917-18. For the most part they were living on borrowed time. Many of them were short months from induction and left shortly after the opening of school. Many of them were fortunate enough to make the grade in a military reserve and others made their way surely toward pre-medical and pharmaceutical schools.

But all were around long enough to drink long and deeply of the elixir of Chapel Hill. Home ties were cast off and like the rest of us they wandered uptown after studying hours for a hamburger at Nick's, they planned long and carefully to have their best girl up on a big dance week-end, they learned the meanings of the mysterious symbols on the class roster sheets and they made Professor Carrington Smith's 1:30 "Lab" with regularity and soon became familiar with the Hill's night spots at Harry's, the Porthole and the Pines.

Day when everybody was itching to get back to the Hill. Out of that first yearning to come back came the realization that there is a real and meaningful place at Carolina for humble frosh, and back went the Class of '46 after its first holidays set on becoming Tar Heels bred.

They've carried on since then in noble fashion. They've filled in on jobs ordinarily assigned to upperclassmen. They've carried more than their share of the load in meeting war-time exigencies and they've prepared to carry on in the name of the University come hell, high-water, induction or Victory.

And there were highlights of the first quarter. The widely publicized Rameses incident and the thrills of their first Duke game. And who can forget the wild politikin' that preceded class elections in the fall? Or fraternity rushing with hot-boxes, high-toned patter and friendly handshakes shoved into six hectic days. Fall Germans followed with fun and frolic with the best gal from dusk till dawn. Then exams and the helpless feeling that they couldn't possibly pass 'em all. But somehow everything worked out and those last days at home after New Year's now the enrollment is 132—not a bad record considering the fact that "Uncle Sam" has a priority on manpower these days. The first students of pharmacy were required to complete only two years of study in this science, but now the state law requires four years of intensive work including such courses as Chemistry (from general through organic), Zoology, Physiology, Pharmacology, Materia Medica, Botany, Applied Latin, and many others in the field of electives. We future Pharmacists are quite proud of this progress. We are no less proud of our leaders here at the University and in public life, as they have all struggled unceasingly to keep the profession on the highest possible plane. Much of the credit for the progress of the school is duly given our Dean Beard, with whom overtime work is an every day procedure . . . working to keep us all on the "straight and narrow." We each are happy to have chosen Pharmacy as a vocation, and fervently intend to keep it "a highly respected profession."

School of Pharmacy

DURING these times when everyone is struggling for advancement, a veritable beehive of activity is the building located on the northeastern end of the campus that houses the School of Pharmacy. This activity began in 1880 when the school was founded at the University. However, it was seventeen years later, in 1897, before the school was permanently established. Only a handful of students started the school, but

THOMAS BOONE, Vice-President
HARRY ALLEN, Student Council

J. FRANK PICKARD, Secretary-Treasurer
LOUIS IRWIN, Student Legislature

The school officers for 1942-43 were: John T. Henley, President; Thomas Boone, Vice-President; J. Frank Pickard, Secretary-Treasurer; Harry Allen, Student Council Representative; Louis Irwin, Student Legislature Representative. Class Presidents were: Mike Borders, Fourth Year; Aubrey Richardson, Third Year; Sam Black, Second Year; Sam Clark, First Year. The North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association officers were: Banks Kerr, President; Albert Jowdy, Vice-President; Anthony Johnston, Secretary; Halycone Collier, Treasurer; Sam Beavans, Chairman of the Executive Committee.

We students of Pharmacy are very fortunate in having a faculty of professors well trained in our profession to lead us. This small but most efficient group is composed of Dean J. G. Beard, Professors E. A. Brecht, H. M. Burlage, M. L. Jacobs, and Ira W. Rose.

Despite the ominous "draft worries," the different student pharmaceutical organizations have had a very successful year. First on the list is the Student Branch of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association which, under the capable leadership of Banks Kerr, boosted its membership to the largest in its history. It includes over eighty per cent of the entire student body enrollment. In line with the war effort, the majority of the programs have evolved from the work of various students. Its sister organization, the Pharmacy Senate, under the presidency of Albert Jowdy, has had its usual series of splendid student programs. "On your feet and express yourself" is its original and present motive. Last, but far from least, the honorary fraternity of Rho Chi, continues its good work in developing scholarship among students.

As for the social highlights of the year, we recall the "get-acquainted" parties for the new students given by Kappa Psi, Phi Delta Chi, and Kappa Epsilon; the annual banquet and dances; and the Pharmacy Senate social. These were tops in the entertainment. Also there is always plenty of "good time" at the State Convention meetings of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association.

Throughout these days of toil and despair, we future Pharmacists stand ready to carry on by giving our all—our lives if need be—for the preservation of the things we Americans hold sacred and for which we are willing to fight. We shall serve the best we know how!

School of Law

FRED EDNEY

HARVEY HAMILTON
Legislature Representative

JOHN KILPATRICK
Student Council Representative

THE CLOSE of the present academic period marks the first year of the operation of the Law School during the war emergency. This year has seen a diminution of the faculty and the student body. Among the faculty members leaving were former Dean M. T. Van Hecke, who is now Regional Director for the War Labor Board; Henry P. Brandis, Jr., who is now serving with the Navy; and John P. Dalzell, who is now Assistant to the Solicitor of the Department of Interior. However, by dint of the unstinting effort of Dean R. H. Wettach and the other members of the faculty, the Law School has been able to operate successfully throughout the year.

Student affairs in the Law School are regulated by the elected officers of its student government—the Law Association. This association promotes all student activity. The program of the current year has been curtailed because of the war; the chief social functions of the session being the Law School reception in the fall and the Law School banquet at the end of the year.

Some of the distinctive features of the Law School are its well-known summer school, which presents recognized authorities on various subjects of law; its student publication, The North Carolina Law Review; and its chapter of the national honorary society of "Order of the Coif."

Since the outbreak of the war, the Law School has followed the trend of the whole University in seeking to do its bit toward the National Defense effort. For the duration of the emergency, the period of study may be shortened by attendance throughout the entire year, and new students are being admitted with less preparation than the three years of college work required formerly. During the past school year more than four-fifths of the student body have entered branches of the service. Former law students are on every American battle front in the world.

The prospective student body for next year is small. However, it is certain that the Law School will continue to operate throughout the emergency under the present faculty and administrative staff.

Students leaving school during this year were:

Cy Hogue, Wallace Murchison, Tom Wadden, Elton Edwards, George Shipp, Arthur Jones, Milton Short, and Bob Page.

School of Medicine

OPERATING on a year-round basis for the duration, the University Medical School this year has continued to maintain its high standards in holding and even bettering its position as one of the top-ranking two-year medical schools in the country.

Additional equipment and an increased number of faculty members have been employed to take care of the ever-growing size of classes in wartime, and to provide a thorough training in a profession vital to the war effort.

The physical equipment has been immensely improved with the construction of a spacious medical building which houses classrooms, well-equipped laboratories, and the medical library. The building was first occupied in June, 1939.

Dr. W. R. Berryhill is completing his second successful year as Dean of the Medical School. Young, capable, and energetic, Dr. Berryhill took office in the autumn of 1941, following the return of Dr. W. deB. MacNider, formerly dean of the school, to teaching and research work.

In June of last year the Medical School began operating on a year-round basis with new classes entering every nine months. This new schedule, adopted by the majority of medical schools in the country, will presumably be maintained for the duration of the war.

JOHN CHAMBLISS
President, Whitehead Society

Many members of the faculty, in addition to graduates of the Medical School, are now serving in the service of the country on far-flung battlefields. Members of the faculty in uniform or on war duty include:

H. G. Baity, Agnes Dolvin, C. E. Brown, H. D. Bruner, R. E. Stone, F. G. Patterson, Herbert Fox, I. H. Manning, Jr., R. G. Fleming, W. B. McCutcheon, and C. E. Anderson.

Life On The Hill

GRAIL INITIATION IS FUN FOR THE WHOLE CAMPUS.

*L*IFE AT CAROLINA is one without routine, without formality. Things are accomplished here, but in a carefree, friendly way. To make a sketch of Carolina life is to combine incidents, impressions that are complete in themselves, but add up to a picture of life here on the whole.

Carolina: trees blossoming in the early spring; bicycles that roll up behind strollers, threatening to spill them into the brick gutters; election campaigns with politicians at their friendliest; Sound and Fury shows, signifying nothing, but displaying coed pulchritude; Tar Heels in 8:00 classes; the eternal struggle between the Di and the Phi; Professor Lefler, who brings history back alive five days a week; the Carolina Mag staff, dashing to make an overdue deadline; new coeds in fall finery during sorority rush week; Ab's with its conglomeration of books and people; University club pep rallies in the fall; the 11:45 rush in Marley's to beat the 12:00 ruling . . . these belong in life at Carolina.

But changes have come to the University: Milkshakes in the Y at a new cost of 15c; baseball games with sentries checking every ball game fan in and out of the Navy area; substitute cokes in the drug stores downtown; NROTC and CVTC drills; long lines of people waiting for food at the Inn, Swain Hall; the mixture of uniforms and civilian clothes in classes; cadets in Carr Dormitory, Pre-met students in Smith; small time orchestras at Fall Germans, Mid-Winters, Junior-Seniors; draft riddled publications, with slashed budgets, depleted staffs; arguments on freezing student government; President Graham, dashing home from Washington for a week-end; good-byes to the boys leaving for the armed forces; freshmen, younger and greener than ever before, trying to cram a little college into their lives before being drafted; cadets on week-end afternoons, standing in line for a movie, flocking to coed dormitories; Carolina gentlemen in Chapel Hill on week-ends, their habitual traveling to Greensboro curtailed. Things are different these days.

DR. WINSLOW SPEAKS AT TAR
HFEL NEWS ANALYSIS PERIOD.

Although life has changed, many Carolina customs will outlast a war: joint studying and socializing in the library; coeds sunbathing on upper dormitory porches; hayrides and beer parties in the spring and fall; the festivity of dance week-ends; the click of ping pong balls on the porch of Graham Memorial; BMOC's at Grail initiations, Fleece tappings; the struggle for publicity between the IRC and the CPU; intramural softball games come spring; long lines of students in the Book Ex at the beginning of the quarter; crowds in the library near exam time; lights from downtown cafes lighting up the puddles in the middle of Franklin Street on rainy nights. It's simple mathematics; these all add up. The result is Carolina.

CTIVITIES

SO HAS ANOTHER GREAT YEAR come to an end at last, and here some two thousand people who have been caught up in the immensity of life at Carolina for nine months are leaving, and are to be joined to the rest of the world again. The familiar noises of our activities here ring still in our ears, and bright effects, by which we have striven to forget classes and studies and worries, ring comfortably around us.

Through these activities we have mixed and known each other. Our lives—our social lives, were woven.

All went to "activities," some led them, some merely enjoyed them. Though dances were not as elaborate and picturesque nor as numerous as last year, we enjoyed them perhaps more. The immensity of the gym floor, the combination dance sets, and the not so big name bands cancelling engagements at the last minute.

When we arrived at the Hill and attended our first football game of the season, it rained. We sat through all the drizzles and pours of the season. And the triumphs of our team never quite evened up the defeats. But it was all very wonderful. The streets and Memorial Hall before the home games were filled with crowds who yelled and cheered, proving ourselves the "second team."

The year fostered a movement toward more and improved entertainment, student entertainment for student enjoyment.

"They" told us often that we were too frivolous this year, that in spite of legislative action curtailing entertainment expenses we still played too much, and that we did not realize the full seriousness of the war. We didn't agree with them. It was the last year here for many of us, it was the last year of real and full functioning activities for all of us. In any event, we have no one but ourselves to blame—or to thank.

Of such is youth. And we were young.

LITTLE MAN, WANTA BE A BMOC

*Y*OU ARE A FRESHMAN here now. Follow well this recipe and we promise that your ambition shall be fulfilled:

Take one student.

Mix well with one, two, three or four years at Carolina.

Stir in sufficient amounts of hard work, a lost cause, a convincing handshake, a photogenic face, and a furrowed brow. Beat well. Allow to simmer for a period in a very public place. Graham Memorial and the various athletic hangouts do equally well.

Turn on heat. Allow to simmer.

Take off fire when done. Ice with widespread smile.

Result: One BMOC.

“*W*HEN DE TEAM’S WINNIN’, they cum right up and say, ‘Howdy, Morris, OUR team’s suttinly doin’ fine.’ But when we lose, they void me on the street and say, ‘Dat team of YOURS is mighty poor.’”

Those words of football waterboy Morris Mason climaxed the University Club’s most effective pre-game pep rally of the year and applause crowded Fetzer Field that night before the Duke game.

But the “Beat Dook” festivities were only one of the many activities of a 1943 University Club that rallied full student support behind the Big Team under its new coach, Jim Tatum.

This year, tanks and soldiers took up the railroad facilities and, along with other Tar Heels, University Club members couldn’t travel with the team. So, by means of their grid-graphs, the whole University got fifty-yard line seats for the Tulane and Fordham games.

Severest test of the season was, surprisingly enough, not to arouse student support but to get them to temper spirit with common sense. That the Rameses incident remained only an incident was due in great part to the efforts of the University Club.

staff it takes the "gaff" in a flood of demands of individuals and groups from all quarters of the campus.

The Self-Help Service, Directory, Handbook, Public Events Calendar, Weekly Bulletin, Rooming and Housing Bureau, Lost and Found Bureau, Information Office, Clearance Center for Organizations, Pre-College Retreat, the Institute of Human Relations, Public Reception Center, assistance to the Administration, and a score of other items in the voluntary service area go on daily. In addition, the Y.M.C.A. presents varied programs of religious and social nature, works with the churches and the local community.

With its board of directors, officers and cabinet, employed staff of three, duly affiliated with the national and world organization, our Carolina Y.M.C.A. has carried on since its founding in 1859. It is now girding itself to take the principal campus load of service to the student body and University as enlistments and the draft deplete the leadership of most campus groups. In its task, the Y.M.C.A. will be joined by its able sister organization, the Y.W.C.A.

Criticism comes from time to time, but the Y remains as the campus organization with the largest voluntary membership of any at Carolina. This year its members numbered 1364, averaging $2.17 in membership fees.

The Y.M.C.A. can be counted on to keep the home fires burning in religious, social, personal and community service until the "boys come home again."

THE TOUCHDOWN PLAY, the strains of "Hark the Sound," the Band comes into its own. There is a huge UNC on the field; it again dissolves into formation; the cymbals clash; it's half time.

Under the directorship of Earl Slocum, the Band has fulfilled its many-sided program. There were pep-rallies at Memorial Hall, cheering when the Band marched down the center aisle, open-air concerts on Sunday afternoon under Davy Poplar, and broadcasts over the Tar Heel Network.

In a tour of the high schools throughout the state, the Band endeavors to encourage local orchestras. In addition to this, the Band sponsors a swing-band concert among campus orchestras.

Not least important among the activities of the Band is the annual Band-Glee Club baseball game which the Band won again last spring.

MEN'S GLEE CLUB

GLEE CLUB ACTIVITIES in the concert field struck a new low this year as war tied up transportation facilities. A precedent was set for the duration, however, when director John E. Toms and the majority of the club hitch-hiked to Raleigh to the only out of town concert of the year. The transportation tangle delayed the music half an hour and necessitated the giving of the program in reverse order. To those who were drafted the next quarter and to those who stayed, however. The performance at Meredith represented a perfect concert tour.

The last sing of the season for some draftable men was the annual campus concert in Hill Hall on the week-end before winter quarter examinations. The party given by the Women's Glee Club after the concert stayed carefully out of the Auld Lang Syne groove, and broke up at the unheard of hour of seven in deference to exams.

The presentation of Hayden's "The Creation" by the club together with the Women's Club and the Chapel Hill Choral Club concluded the concert year.

SOUND and FURY

BEN HALL, President

*R*ATIONING, THE BUGABOO OF 1942-43, didn't spare Carolina's infant theater unit. In its fourth year of existence, Sound and Fury was hard hit by a rationing of materials, time and talent. This put an end to annual big productions on the Bagdad Daddy order, but not to liberal doses of entertainment as served by Sound and Fury casts all during the year.

Starting in September, the group geared its fun-making to wartime campus needs and in each quarter produced song-full, laugh-full, girl-full reviews.

In the first days of the fall quarter it was the College Night Show with the memorable sales talk of Tom Wadden and the guiding genius of Tiny Hutton. Late in the term, Sound and Fury devoted a full measure of its time and energy to presenting the Benefit War Chest Follies.

So it went throughout the school year. Under its officers, President Ben Hall, Vice-President Artie Fisher, Secretary Sue Harwood and Business Manager Hubert Philpott, Sound and Fury completed its fourth year in show business by supplying the war-grim campus with a necessary smile.

The Hillel Foundation

*T*HE B'NAI B'RITH HILLEL FOUNDATION, a national collegiate organization which has as its purpose the coordination of cultural, religious, and social life among the Jewish students of eighty colleges and universities, was established at Chapel Hill in 1936.

Under the supervision of Rabbi Joseph Gitin, its director, the Foundation offers Orthodox and Reform services for students, Pre-Flight cadets and members of the Army Meteorology unit, weekly discussion groups and social activities.

These activities are directed by the Cabinet, a group of elected students, who formulate and execute the actions of the Foundation. Meetings, informal gatherings, and services are held at the Hillel House, adjacent to the campus, which is open at all times for the use of the students. The Foundation participates in the work of the University Religious Council and cooperates with other campus groups.

The University Religious Council

CARTER BROAD, President

*T*HE UNIVERSITY RELIGIOUS COUNCIL is an inter-faith organization devoted to the integration of the religious activities of the campus. Its purpose is three-fold: to enable students to acquire a better understanding and appreciation of the various religious faiths; to enlarge the community of religious brotherhood at Carolina; and to foster undertakings in the directions of inter-faith cooperation and brotherhood. Its membership is open to all interested religious groups among the students.

This year, in fulfilling that purpose, the Religious Council each month held an open forum. The theme of these discussions was the contribution of each faith to religion. A qualified person from the various groups discussed the peculiar contributions of his faith. An open question period followed. These meetings were attended by the general campus as well as the representatives of the Council.

Each meeting was followed by an informal fellowship hour. The different groups took turns playing host, each being in charge of the arrangements and the fellowship hour once during the year.

In an attempt to render permanent the values achieved from this year's experience, records of all meetings were kept and filed in the Council archives. A formal constitution and statement of purpose was drawn up and ratified by the Council.

Membership on the Council is divided among the various religious groups. Each group sent its own president, its adviser, and two elected representatives to sit on the Council. All meetings except those called for business were open to the public.

In the degree of fellowship and appreciation achieved, the Council feels a genuine sense of accomplishment. This year has brought to every group participating, new insight into the sources of power and an increased understanding of all faiths.

CAROLINA WORKSHOP

FROM NEED OF GREATER interest and appreciation of student work in the Arts, grew the Carolina Workshop Council.

Known to students as the Workshop, it has been this group that has integrated the Creative Art Fields—promoted and projected student creative art work more adequately to the campus.

The group originated in the fall of 1941. Its members were chosen from the seven art fields here at the University. They include the five departments—Dramatic Art, Radio, Creative Writing, Art, Music and the two extra-curricular activities—Photography and Modern Dance.

Twenty-one persons make up the Council; two students and one faculty member from each field. Richard Adler and Samuel Selden have been Chairman and Faculty Advisor, respectively, during the Workshop's two years of activity.

Each Spring, as an outgrowth of Council planning, the Workshop presents a five-day festival, exhibiting outstanding student work in each of the divisions.

Gold keys are given out as prizes to the best all-round student in each department. Last year's winners were: Hugh Morton, Photography; Anice Garmany, Modern Dance; Robert Carroll, Dramatic Art; Garland Peterson, Art; William Klenz, Music; Frank Brink, Radio; and James Cox, Creative Writing.

The Workshop has presented many internationally known artists to the Campus including Paul Green, Playwright; Lee Simonson, Designer; Clare Leighton, Wood-cut Artist; Clarence Adler, Pianist; James Boyd, Novelist, and Robert Frost, Poet.

This Fall, the Workshop was made an official body by unanimous consent of the Student Legislature. It was granted a charter by that same legislative group authorizing it to be a channeling agency through which all public mention of each department must pass.

Through donations made by the Order of the Holy Grail, the Workshop has received each year enough money with which to carry out its program.

UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

MAY JO PERKY, President

*U*NDER THE BATON OF Benjamin F. Swalin, the University Symphony Orchestra has completed another successful year in presenting the more serious forms of music to the students. Giving a concert each quarter, it has endeavored to include soloists from the music department playing works such as the Wieniawski Violin Concerto and the Liszt Piano Concerto. Included also in the repertoire of the orchestra are such diversified works as the Saint-Saens "Carnival of Animals," the Mozart G Minor Symphony, and the "Nut-Cracker Suite" by Tschaikowsky.

A new outgrowth of the orchestra this year was the forming of a chamber music group which gave a concert this Spring. Members were drawn from the personnel of the orchestra, including strings and woodwinds.

Despite the loss of members to the armed forces, the orchestra has survived and is determined that "there shall be no cultural black-out in North Carolina."

Officers this year were: May Jo Perky, President and Concertmaster; Charles Medlin, Secretary-Librarian; Edward Rollins, Publicity Manager.

CHI DELTA PHI

JAU CHAPTER of Chi Delta Phi, national honorary creative writing fraternity for women, was organized on this campus in June, 1941. Election into this group is based on outstanding ability and interest in creative writing. Its purpose is to encourage a high standard of literary work among its members and to promote wide interest in creative writing in the University.

At weekly meetings members meet and discuss their work. In order to increase skill and versatility in writing, experiments are tried in surrealistic poetry, the modern essay and many other literary forms.

Officers were: Betty Perry, President, Fall Quarter; Ann Seely, President, Winter Quarter; Anne Osterhaut, Vice-President, Secretary; Betty Seligman, Treasurer.

Members were: Allie Bell, Sue Brubaker, Maureen Coley, Olive Price Charters, Mary Gwynne Campbell, Sarah Davis, Suzanne Feld, Marion Gurney, Mary Olden Hopkins, Sarah Justice, Jean de Noyelles, Nancy Smith, and Elizabeth Stonely.

KAPPA EPSILON

*K*APPA EPSILON sorority was founded at the State University of Iowa on May 15th, 1921. It is an honorary fraternity for women students in Pharmacy.

The object and purpose of Kappa Epsilon is to unite the women students in Pharmacy; to cooperate with the faculty of the college where chapters are established, to stimulate in its members a desire for high scholarship, to foster a professional consciousness and to provide a bond of lasting loyalty, interest and friendship.

This, the Lambda Chapter, was established at the University of North Carolina on January 12, 1941. Since then it has become an essential part of the School of Pharmacy.

ALPHA CHI SIGMA

SINCE ITS FOUNDING IN 1902 at the University of Wisconsin, Alpha Chi Sigma, only professional chemical fraternity in the United States, has grown rapidly until today it includes 53 collegiate chapters, 15 professional chapters and 11 professional groups. The fraternity, comprising over 15,000 members, has as its objectives the advancement of chemistry and the promotion of fellowship among chemists.

Rho chapter was established on May 6, 1912. In its 31 years on the Hill it has built for itself a real part in the activities of the chemistry department. Working in close cooperation with the faculty, it assists the staff in the performance of the many non-instructional tasks. This year it conducted a safety program which resulted in a sharp decline in laboratory accidents, worked on a scrap campaign that collected many vital pounds of metal and rubber in the department.

The chapter has its social side, too, which provides an occasional welcome change for the boys of Venable, a change from days and nights of work with their strange and all-too frequently foul-smelling chemicals.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

VIRGINIA TERRY, President

*M*USIC IN THE BREEZES around Hill Music Hall was something more than just heresy this year. The Women's Glee Club, under the direction of John Toms, had one of the most active years in its history. Meeting twice weekly, it sang music both very old and very new; singing for work and for the fun of it.

Highlight of their fall quarter program was the Glee Club's presentation during the Christmas season of Bach's "Magnificat." In the winter they joined forces with the department of dramatic art and the music department proper to give the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "Iolanthe." For the spring commencement program Mr. Toms' Glee Club did a magnificent job of Haydn's "Creation."

Y. W. C. A.

*I*N ITS SEVEN YEARS at the University, the Young Women's Christian Association has seen the needs of Carolina coeds and sought to meet these needs. It has served, not as another organization, but as an interrelated group of activities, each working towards the same ultimate goal while still seeking its own means of expression.

For the school year of 1942-43, the Y.W.C.A. has included the following outlets for its work. One of the largest of its activities was the Coed Jobobservational Conference, presented in February. Outstanding men and women from ten fields of work in which women are most needed were invited to speak before the coeds and help them to place themselves in jobs after graduation.

An all-day planning meeting held in January enabled the Y leaders to coordinate their work and design it to better meet the needs of a campus at war. The regular Wednesday night dormitory devotional services, the bi-weekly fellowship suppers, the newly opened Y library, the Sunday evening visits to faculty homes, the Red Cross knitting units and innumerable other services have played their part in bringing the coeds a better understanding of the life and duties that face them upon graduation.

Officers for the year were: Mary Martha Cobb, President; Edith Fore, Secretary; Jennie Clark French, Treasurer, and Mrs. Martha Johnson, Resident Secretary.

Women's Graduate Association — Kenan Hall

ELEANOR LYNCH

*L*IFE IN KENAN HALL this year was built around the aim for the dormitory—The Individual Living in Group Life. Y.M.C.A. meetings directed by Miss Margaret Scott created religious and social atmosphere. At the monthly house meeting all phases of University life were discussed.

Very social was life in Kenan, too. Their dances on Hallowe'en and Valentine's Day were among the campus' outstanding social events of the year. During the fall quarter a buffet supper was served in honor of the naval officers at the Pre-Flight School. Informal teas were given after football games in the fall, and the faculty was entertained at tea in the spring. Cadets found open house at Kenan every week-end.

The year's officers were: Eleanor Lynch, President; Ellen New, Treasurer and Social Chairman; Ellen New, Beverly Steinert, Eleanor Lynch, Advisory Board.

Seated: S. DAVIS, COLBY, ALLISON, WEBB, J. DAVIS.
Standing: HOOD, HUBER, BRANDON, CAHOON, BOST, BUICE, CARPENTER, HENRITZY.

HOUSE PRIVILEGES BOARD

*T*HE HOUSE PRIVILEGES BOARD was organized this year for the purpose of interpreting, enforcing, and improving the rules for coeds visiting in men's rooming houses and fraternities. The Board is composed of seven members of the executive committee of the Inter-Fraternity Council, five members of the Inter-Town Council, and five coeds appointed by the Speaker of the Senate.

At the beginning of fall quarter the old Inter-Fraternity agreement was extended to include co-op houses represented on the Inter-Town Council, and it was decided that the agreement, now known as the House Entertainment Privileges Agreement, be made permanent. This means that as soon as an individual house has signed the agreement and coeds have signed it, coeds may go into that house.

The Board meets bi-weekly to try violations of the agreement and to discuss ways for improving it. By having the boys and the coeds cooperatively working on the agreement, the number of annual violations have decreased considerably.

Officers: Frances Allison, President; Junius Davis, Secretary.

GRAHAM MEMORIAL BOARD OF DIRECTORS

DIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE for the maintenance and the administration of Graham Memorial, the Student Union Building, the Board of Directors faced an extremely difficult year.

Confronted with steadily decreasing student fees, but an unprecedented increase in use by students, Pre-Flight Cadets and Pre-Meteorology students, the Board revised a former policy of having an extensive entertainment program and instead encouraged the Directorship—made up of imaginative Henry Moll and hard working Dean Parker—to put the Union on a sound financial basis and to radically change the physical plant of the building in order to satisfy the recreational needs of a changing campus.

To the credit of the Board, it can be said that not only were pre-war standards maintained, but that every effort was made to accommodate the University's new military guests. Typical of the year were the various physical changes—the creation of a new office, the renovated Horace William's Lounge, the Leisure Lounge and the Book and Music Corners.

CAROLINA INDEPENDENT COED ASSOCIATION

MEMBERS OF THE CICA DISCUSS THE PROBLEM OF THE NON-SORORITY COED.

MEMBERSHIP IN THE Carolina Independent Coed Association is open to non-sorority and "Stray-Greek" girls on campus. Its purpose is to create and stimulate interest and participation among independent coeds in campus affairs, to promote fellowship among the independent coeds through social activities, and to provide organized support for worthy candidates for campus offices.

Officers for the year were: Martha Guy, President, Fall Quarter; Betty Atz, Vice-President, Fall Quarter, President, Winter and Spring Quarters; Shirley Sanderlin, Vice-President, Winter and Spring Quarters; Nancy Smith, Secretary; Dale Rosenbloom, Treasurer; Celeste Hamrick, Social Chairman; Lucy Lee Kennedy, Publicity Chairman.

Members of the Executive Board were: Duzie Buice, Buddy Cummings, Pat Henritz, Marsha Hood, Sara Justice, Mary T. McCormick, Mildred McCray, Elaine Mendes, Betty Moore, Isabel Robinson.

DEBATE COUNCIL

*R*ESOLVED, THAT THE UNITED NATIONS should establish a permanent Federal World Union with the power to tax and regulate interstate commerce, to maintain a police force, to settle international disputes and to enforce such settlements and to provide for the admission of other nations which accept the principles of the union.

This was the theme of the 1942-1943 debate season for the University Debate Council and Squad. In squad discussions, in tournaments, and in formal debates, this was the principal query. Squad members had opportunity throughout the year to read material relevant to this question. In this way, the Council feels that its contribution to the students, in this first wartime year in two decades, has been significant indeed. For students have together studied the problems that we all must face in the period after the war.

Highlight of the Council's year's activities was its first All-Campus Debate Tournament. Twenty-five groups answered the invitations extended by the Council through its tourney chairman, Bill Cobb. Entered in the tourney were teams representing the Town Girls, CICA Di, Phi, CPU, IRC, Chi Phi, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Alpha, Tau Epsilon Phi, and Kappa Alpha. The CICA's affirmative team of Misses Phyllis Yates and Lee Bronson won the tournament by defeating in the finals the Phi Delta Theta negative team of Bucky Harward and Mac Lane.

The Council continued the policy renewed last year of participation in intercollegiate tournaments. This year, the University's teams traveled to Charlotte twice to take part in the Dixie and Grand Eastern tournaments, sponsored by Winthrop College. In each instance, Carolina teams were adjudged among the best.

War travel conditions in the main halted the usual long trips, but the Council, in addition to participation in tournaments, continued its dual forensic meets with other North Carolina colleges. Wake Forest, East Carolina Teachers, and Davidson were debated during the year. Principal debaters for the University, both in tournaments and in dual meets, were: Seniors Bill Cobb, Pat Henritz, Phyllis Yates, and Dick Railey; Juniors Howard Ennis, Clyde Rollins, and Lee Bronson; Sophomores E. O. Brogden, Herbert Temple, and Aaron Johnson; and Freshman Gene Byrd.

The Council, composed of six students and three faculty men, concerns itself with the administration of Carolina's intercollegiate debate program. It determines policy and governs the squad, membership in which is open to every University student. The Council, this year, has contributed financially to the Di, the Phi, and the CPU, other student forensic and discussion groups.

The International Relations Club

*T*HE INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB, winner of the 1942 Alpha Phi Omega service award, brought to the campus representatives from the various United Nations. First to appear on the rostrum in Memorial Hall was Mahmoud Hassan Bey of Egypt, who was followed by India's Sir Girja Bajpai. Continuing its program of presenting informed leaders from our Allies, the IRC sponsored Yugoslavia's Constantin Fotitch, Poland's Jan Ciechanowski, Prof. J. A. F. Auer of Harvard, Harold Land of Norway and various other leaders.

Members of the organization were successful in bringing to Carolina the headquarters of the Intercollegiate Gallup Poll. Local studies of opinions on various topics were made monthly, and results were compared with those received from the national poll.

Students and faculty members appeared on the IRC forums which were conducted throughout the year. Informed students and faculty members ably discussed questions of current interest before large audiences who were afforded the opportunity to participate in the question period which followed each panel discussion.

Important issues of the day were delved into by club members and guests at the weekly meetings. These sessions encourage active participation and thought by those present and give members an opportunity to exchange views.

The International Relations Club is a non-partisan, non-political organization of forty members whose purpose is to stimulate an interest in the world scene and to bring to the campus statesmen who can present first-hand information on various international problems. The IRC has endeavored to create a better understanding of the United Nations and to encourage thought about post-war problems.

CAROLINA POLITICAL UNION

CAROLINA ENTERED ITS second year of war, a year characterized by changes, by uncertainty, and by a great need for clear thinking about our world. Realizing the need for a more extensive and less glamorous work, the Carolina Political Union, a non-partisan student group with a membership of twenty-five, embarked on a wartime program.

Throughout the year, the Union held panels on wide and diverse subjects. The first panel of the year saw N.C.C.N.'s Dean Taylor, and Carolina's Howard Odum and Guy Johnson discuss various aspects of the Negro problem. Dean Bradshaw, Rex Winslow and Paul Green came back with a well-rounded, fast-moving discussion of the "Future of the American College". Later panels saw student-faculty discussions of the questions "What Are We Fighting For?" and "The Future of Student Government".

During the Fall Quarter, the Union presented Robert Minor, Assistant Secretary of the Communist Party, Ralph Bard, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Ray Tucker, columnist and author, Clyde Egleton, Chairman of the Studies Committee of the Organization to Study the Peace led off the Winter Quarter activities.

Throughout the year and planned to synchronize with Union activities came the CPU Roundtable. Running frequently in the Tar Heel, the Roundtable dealt with the broader aspects of the Negro problem, the issues of war taxation, and the problems of the eleven Southeastern states. Between these series came many pithy individual columns.

Not to be disparaged were the meetings of the union held each Sunday night in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial. Frequent, informal, and helpful talks were given by campus experts on current topics. One meeting adjourned to Dr. Frank's Sunday night "at home." Dean Bradshaw made off-the-record reports on Carolina's war days. No one will forget the weekly rebuttals between amiables Dr. Kattsoff and Dr. Godfrey or the old standby and "booklist" Dr. E. J. Woodhouse—the only faculty member.

The war dented membership and elections were frequent—or as Chairman Railey put it, there hasn't been a meeting with twenty-five members yet. Billy Britt—Johnson County, handled the Treasury—the Debate Council came through. Amiable secretary "Mose" Robinson tempered the minutes. Jimmy Wallace—the Bulletin arrived late. Jim Loeb—Grapevine "propaganda" and "Have you got your column yet?" Harvey Segal—statistics are essential. Lem Gibbons—he couldn't find the planning committee. Betty Etz—in Texas. Bibba Anderson—suffrage wasn't enough. Bill Cobb—right wing guard. Dick Railey—Murfreesboro, Washington, South Building, and an increasing autograph collection. Bob Eppler—sociology a religion. Dewey Dorsett—some one talked rashly; he was backed up just a bit. Bring a guest. Pete Munroe—Japan's a menace. Ad inquitum.

Officers were: Richard Railey, Chairman; Lem Gibbons, Vice-President; John Robinson, Secretary; William Britt, Treasurer. Committee Chairmen were: William Cobb, Membership; James Wallace, Publicity; Lem Gibbons, Planning; James Loeb, Column.

Faculty Advisors were: Frank P. Graham, Miss Harriet Eliot, Francis Bradshaw, J. L. Godfrey, L. O. Kattsoff, R. S. Winslow, M. S. Breckenridge and R. W. McDonald.

PHARMACY SENATE

*F*OUNDED IN 1940 by Dr. E. A. Brecht, Assistant Professor of Pharmacy, the Pharmacy Senate is now in its fourth year of activity. Though youngest of its fellow organizations in the School of Pharmacy, it has earned a reputation for leadership.

It is the purpose of the Pharmacy Senate to promote inter-class friendship and cooperation within the School of Pharmacy. This is accomplished by a free discussion of the various, current, professional problems.

Membership is limited to thirty active members, who must maintain membership by active participation in each meeting.

Officers: Al Jowdy, President; Halcyone Collier, Secretary; Ralph Teague, Recorder; Ed Beddingfield, Reporter.

Members: Harry Allen, Glen Beam, Sam Beavans, Ed Beddingfield, Sam Black, Mike Borders, Charles Brady, Dr. E. A. Brecht, Bill Canaday, Rankin Caruthers, Halcyone Collier, Hicks Corey, Lucile Gillespie, Rudolph Hardy, John Henley, Mac Herring, Marsha Hood, Al Jowdy, Lucy Lee Kennedy, Banks Kerr, Joe La Rocca, Ruth Patterson, J. DIALECTIC SENATE

*T*HE DIALECTIC SENATE is Carolina's oldest organization and the second oldest literary organization in the United States. Founded in 1795 it is rich in tradition and lore and has an enviable record of contributions to the campus. Traditionally, it has taken the lead in meeting University needs, being the first organization to present dramatic productions, carry on debating and, together, with the Philanthropic Assembly, substantially endowing the Library, jointly publishing the Carolina Magazine for a number of years, and during a good part of its history furnishing the core of student government.

Today it continues its program of the promotion of sound thinking, clear expression and training in democratic living through the discussion of current issues—Campus, State, National and International. Patterning its organization on that of the State Senate it discusses questions in the form of "bills" or resolutions thus promoting intelligent interaction of opinion and providing training in parliamentary procedure.

The Senate, however, does not limit itself merely to discussion but has both investigating and executive committees—together and present facts and information and to carry out the resolutions of the Senate. Thus it provides an important sounding board for student opinion and an instrument for the initiation of student action on campus questions.

Debates of a more formal character are held frequently with other campus organizations. The annual Di-Phi freshman and varsity debates have become a tradition. The Dialectic Senate also co-sponsors each spring the state-wide high school debating tournament under the auspices of the North Carolina High School Debating Union.

Although primarily a student discussion group the Senate often calls in prominent members of the University community to contribute to the discussion of questions in fields in which they are authorities. This year, among others, Dean R. B. House, Mrs. M. H. Stacy, Dean Roland B. Parker, Paul Green and Coach Tatum have been guests of the Senate.

Prominent among the Senate's activities is the work of the Student Panel Committee which organizes panels on current issues to appear before the high schools and civic organizations of the state and to present radio programs over nearby stations.

A large percentage of Senate members have used training gained in the Senate to achieve positions of honor and distinction. The Dialectic Senate Hall is lined with portraits of its notable former members—cabinet officers, Congressmen, Governors and one President of the United States—James K. Polk. Former Presidents of the Senate now at the University are Dr. Frank Graham, Dean Francis F. Bradshaw, Dr. A. R. Newsome and Phillips Russell.

Nor is the social side neglected. Highlights of the Di's social activities are the annual dance and banquet. Smaller receptions and "Get Togethers" are held throughout the year.

PHI ASSEMBLY

SHOULD STUDENT CARS be banned for the duration? Should campus dances be open to all students? Should Student Government be frozen? Should University-owned eating places make a profit by high food prices? These are some of the timely questions the Philanthropic Assembly discussed. Although the Phi is one of the two oldest literary societies in the nation, and although it is no longer an active part of student government, its age and traditions, of bills of strict parliamentary procedure do not mean that it is antiquated as far as ideas and actions are concerned. It serves its function well as an outlet for expression of student opinion.

EDWARDS

BROGDEN

The Phi Assembly deviated from its former procedure of presenting only bills for discussion by presenting panels of student-faculty or entirely faculty participation. One of these panel discussions was "The Question of India's Independence" participated in by Dr. Buchanan, Dr. Erickson, and Dr. McKinnie.

In keeping with its policy of teaching student parliamentary order, the Assembly played host to outside speakers on this subject, one of whom was the Hon. Thad Eure, the Secretary of the State of North Carolina.

The Phi added to its projects of the year debates with the Dialectic Senate, and co-sponsorship of the annual state-wide high school debating tournament which is held in the spring under the auspices of the North Carolina High School Debating Union.

Officers this year were: Fall Quarter: Elton Edwards, Speaker; Robert Rosenast, Speaker Pro-tem; E. O. Brogden, Jr., Sergeant-at-Arms; Jessica Graham, Reading Clerk; and Frank Earnheart, Parliamentarian.

PHI ASSEMBLY MEMBERS GET READY TO OPEN THE REGULAR TUESDAY NIGHT MEETING.

IT WAS A PROBLEMATIC YEAR for publications. Patting each other on the shoulder, knifing each other in the back, each of the three leading campus publications came through their first complete year of war and wartime restrictions.

The Daily Tar Heel, in spite of a much sliced budget and depleted staff, continued as a daily, increased the size of its type, did not go down to tabloid as had been anticipated. Under Harwood and Hoke the paper adopted a uniform policy of conservatism. The Tar Heel was read by many, ignored by many, and criticised by all.

The Carolina Magazine felt the rise in the cost of printing, the shortages in engraving supplies. Edited by the inseparable characters, Meyer and Carruth, the Mag evolved from Henry Moll's Pacemaker combination into a newspaperman's magazine. The Mag survived a short-lived move for its abolishment, and ended the year with a bang-up centennial anniversary issue by Adler.

Four editors succeeded each other in quick order on the draft-riddled YACKETY YACK. None knew what source would next threaten the existence of the annual. Beginning with Morton, the YACK passed into Hobbs' hands, on to Snyder, finally emerged as the finished product under Bishopric.

Into the PU Board's sanctified chambers constantly stormed members of the three publications. Asking for more money, decrying the constant cuts in budgets and salaries, all worked for the salvation of their particular brain-child.

The circulation department, gravy pot of all campus publications, saw its staffs snatched away into service, received more calls and complaints than any other student office on the campus.

It was a hectic year for publications. As their numbers decreased, the faithful few worked harder and harder, lending aid to each other, and by the last of the year there was almost a general communitizing of the three staffs.

Publications still face a dark and most uncertain future. Some say that all three will be abolished, others say only one or two. Nobody knows.

Seated—SNYDER, FRANKEL, LEAR, WELLS.
Standing—WEBB, HARTSELL.

PUBLICATIONS UNION BOARD

*F*ACED WITH THE PROBLEM of maintaining the inherent quality of the three campus publications in the light of decreasing revenue from both student fees and advertising, the Publications Union Board faced a series of critical situations during the scholastic year 1942-43.

Wartime exigencies forced the Board to put the campus publications on a quarterly budget system and caused an unprecedented centralization of power in all publications offices. In addition, the Board effected a complete reorganization of the Daily Tar Heel Circulation Department in order to meet new conditions brought about by the dissolution of Carolina dormitory life.

THE 1943 YACKETY YACK

*I*N THE BEGINNING was Hugh Morton and the work was Morton's. And then came Hunt Hobbs. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of the 1943 YACKETY YACK. Then Hobbs departed from the scene. Then there was a man sent from the P. U. Board whose name was Ben Snyder. The same was sent to bear witness of the light and finish the job conceived by Hobbs."—Revelations.

And so the 1943 YACKETY YACK came into being. It had its genesis in the Battle of the Elections won by editor primus, Hugh Morton, in April. It received its first impetus through the victories won by editor secundus, Hunt Hobbs, in the Battles of the Budget and the Make-up fought in October and November. Finally it was whipped into shape during the long winter months by editor tertius, Ben Snyder, through the difficult campaign of the Advancing Deadline and the Battle of the Midnight Oil.

All this—plus a lightening switch of the business interests from Bahnsen Gray to Bob Powell to Ardis Kipp and Bill Sharkey—came to pass amid the ceaseless hammering of a half-dozen typewriters, the infernal confusion brought about by the conflicting ideas of a trio of editors and the ever present threat of a complete shutdown on engraving materials.

Yet there were those who saw fit to prevail against hazards hitherto unknown in the publication of a Carolina yearbook. There was dutiful Jim Loeb working after hours to meet engraving deadlines, there was conscientious Virginia Klages working overtime to get the class sections in shape, there was photographer Karl Bishopric sacrificing time and convenience again and again for the good of the YACK and there was Scoop Campbell working from his post in the Naval Pre-Flight School. And there were others—all of whom put their shoulders to the common wheel.

The finished product is in your hands. To you remains the task of judging whether or not the conflict so fought was worth the effort. For us there was zest in the struggle and there comes a certain satisfaction in knowing that the job is done, the battle over.

CAROLINA MAGAZINE

SYLVAN MEYER, Editor.

ARDIS KIPP, Business Manager.

COLOR, ENTERTAINMENT, art and literature, information—these were the aims of Mag editors this year. No longer the rough paper, heavy-worded monument to the campus longhairs, the 99 year-old Carolina Magazine entered the field of popular entertainment for good, and within these four categories it presented material to meet the criticism of every segment of the campus.

It was a year of personalities for the Mag. Dave Hanig, poet and short story writer, who was always taking you down in his mental notebook as material for a future character; Bob Levin, Tar Heel reporter, who kept us all on our toes with sharp articles of information and analysis; Ben McKinnon, shrewd and witty humor editor, who recruited the cartoons and humor stories that kept us laughing; Anne Montgomery, pert, chipper, and everybody's gal, who lent her facile brush to clever Mag illustrations; Dick Adler, the worry boy, whose editorial talents supplied the Mag with serious short stories and poetry from every rank; and editors Meyer and Carruth, who ran the office when they wanted, went to the movies when they wanted and kept the office lights burning 'til the wee hours before publication.

From a strictly serious magazine to a popular publication in two years was no easy task. But the brightly illustrated Mag of '42-'43 proved it could be done. New make-up ideas and plenty of photographs kept the pages lively, while photography expert Karl Bishopric appeased campus tastes with glamour shots of Carolina's coeds.

From the serious angle, the Mag served a purpose that only it could fill. This was a year of stress and students floundered in a bewildering mass of contradictory information about drafts, reserve programs, serving opportunities and changes in a wartime University. The Mag's non-fiction writers probed these problems to the core, and tied together the loose ends that the Tar Heel was unable to portray because of its limited space. Always with a crusading spirit, the Mag unhesitatingly dove into questions of administrative criticism, and with a pungent editorial page, the editors asked and answered the long-range questions that troubled every student's uneasy mind.

The Mag drove into its hundredth year with a new tradition and an up-to-date philosophy of publications; a mag to serve and entertain the student body.

THE DAILY TAR HEEL

Board found funds scarce and the Tar Heel changed to a larger, bulkier type. Staff members were hard to find as experienced DTH-men left for the services and freshmen found the road to glory cut short. It was tough, but flunkies were just not there.

Printing the latest information from the War Manpower Commission via South Building was a task in itself as the powers that be changed their minds almost daily. News Briefs moved to the front as international events eclipsed campus politics and lesser doings.

Bucky Harward—deliberate, clear thinking, and well-liked—sat in the editor's hot-seat. Faced almost daily with problems affecting everything from campus morale to the University's position with the General Assembly, he steered a middle-road through a morass of uncertainty, coming out when occasion demanded to back his convictions.

Characterized by its columnists, the Tar Heel had a consistently good editorial page. The Wearry Wishers—Hayden and Sylvan, covered everything—and the Squirrel. There was Paul Komisaruk analyzing all—including the week just passed. Stud Gleicher kept "Tabs"—sometimes humorous, sometimes about the 1:30 lab. The detrimental boys—Jud and Bob—wrote on anything and loved it. Henry Moll's No Second Cup was a relief with its easy flowing, impressionistic style of commenting on the various, while Jim Loeb's Outlook cared for the sundry. The CPU Roundtable came out in series on the South, the Negro, and taxation with single issue spurts in between. Among the Damned with Damtoft bordered on the serious, often hit the ridiculous with Hiram Hayseed. Ceiling Zero as Bibba Anderson—Sara or the Duchess—hit the keys. There was Harvey Segal's Sunday commentary on the world in Small World. The IRC Reporter covered world affairs while Grapevine, the coverall, filled in for a harassed editor.

BUCKY HARWARD, Editor

NEVER BEFORE during its fifty-year history was the Daily Tar Heel more valuable to Carolina than in this war year. For, with the establishment of the Pre-Flight School and the consequential decentralization of the student body, its services were a necessary and invaluable asset.

Faced from the beginning with difficulties that further complicated the task of publishing a daily newspaper, the Tar Heel managed to come out much the same as ever. The P. U.

Pipe in mouth, coke in hand, Bob Hoke presided over the news-staff covering more with a smaller staff. The Managing Editor, affectionately known as M. E. was conservative. He pulled no punches, put out the news, and played fair. There was no fiftieth anniversary issue, but Bob has his News Analysis meeting which was good.

Bob Levin "covered" South Building and did a good job. When the Air Corps got Levin, South Building got Walt Damtoft. Dave Bailey acted as night editor along with Jud Kinberg.

Jimmy Wallace fought for Navy news; Sara Yokley did features on the serious, Kat Hill on human interest. Madison Wright and Larry Dale had their "beats" and did them well.

It was a year of personalities on the paper, a year of headaches with circulation, with finances, and a too small staff.

Westy Fanhagan managed the sports staff turning in some solid reporting on a tough job. Don Atran, Sylvan Meyer, and Bob Goldwater banged out some top-notch stories for the most popular page in the morning paper.

There were gripes with the Tar Heel as usual—and that may be what makes it a good paper. Some things were unpopular, errors were more than "just human," but the campus felt its value, its power, more this year than in any other year in our generation.

REMEMBERING

*R*EMEMBERING CAROLINA for the past four years weaves together the loose threads of disconnected events into a now clear picture of where we are going and why.

The picture was not clear three springs ago when the farcical Peace Drive inflated and then collapsed of its own accord. But that was the last year of Joe College in an isolated Chapel Hill.

Four months later a Naval ROTC unit was commissioned, and the whole male student body joined in a quadrupled physical education program. One year later a tall, deep-voiced journalist named Agar stood on the rostrum of Memorial Hall and told a packed audience that war for our democratic way of life was inevitable, the "time for greatness" was here.

Many, even then, understood that, and by December 7 next, an unstunned University merely shifted into high gear to go entirely out for war to defend the way of life it represented.

Crucial events then followed fast. Even before Christmas groundwork was laid for a Carolina Volunteer Training Corps. In May came the first of 1875 Naval Pre-Flight Cadets. The following fall came increased physical education. In March, 275 Pre-Meteorology students commenced training on the campus. A few weeks hence, 1300 Naval Reservists will go on active duty at the University. With them for the rest of the war will be the technical training in medicine and physics that the services need, for quarter by quarter the University had molded its curriculum to meet wartime needs.

And now the picture becomes complete. We have been privileged to be a part of a University as great in war as in peace and unsurpassed by others in either. We have helped to remold her into an essential part of the plan for fighting manpower while still she keeps the essential freedom and progressiveness that is Chapel Hill. We know that when we struggle in Java or the Alps, in the Straits of Malacca or Kiel Canal, it will be good then to remember that we can return to Chapel Hill and find again for what we have been fighting.

WE DO OUR PART FROM CHAPEL HILL

When President Frank Graham said that the University and all its resources were to be dedicated to the war effort, he meant it. Even while he was delivering that convocation speech in the fall of 1940, the work had already begun . . . compulsory physical education . . . a new Naval ROTC unit . . . an expanded airport for Civilian Pilot Training . . . December 7, 1941, and within the week the Carolina Volunteer Training Corps sprang up spontaneously . . . and many more . . . and on July 1, 1943, a vast Naval training program here for over 1,300 reservists . . . then the University will have reached and gone beyond the goal set by President Graham.

STUDENTS IN UNIFORM

*I*N THE AUTUMN of 1940 the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps came to the University, and the tramp of marching feet echoed down the shady streets of sleepy Chapel Hill for the first time since World War I. The war was already going full-blast in Europe and the freshmen members of the NROTC must have sensed that they were being trained to take part in it. Those young deck officers-to-be, who excited so much curiosity in the eyes of a student body and town unused to military dress, are now Juniors, and the end of next year will see them scattered throughout the world on Uncle Sam's men-o'-war.

Then came December 7. Henry Wisebram, a Sophomore and an ex-military school student, conceived an idea that the University ought to have a military training organization to prepare students who would soon be in the army for military service. The rest is history. Wisebram went to South building with his idea, and University officials, realizing that basic military training would be of great value to students, called in men qualified to do the job. Thus, the Carolina Volunteer Training Corps came into being at the first university sponsored training unit of its kind in the country.

Another year has passed. The NROTC has increased in size with members from three classes taking naval training. Former enlistees in the CVTC are already serving on far-flung battlefronts.

The University is geared for war.

SQUAD, TENSHUN!

PARKER REVIEWS THE CORPS.

Carolina Volunteer Training Corps

THE CAROLINA VOLUNTEER TRAINING CORPS was organized two weeks after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. It was a student organization, growing out of the desire of students for military training in preparation for service in the Armed Forces, and sponsored by interested students who had a background of military school or reserve training. Reserve officers among the faculty were called into consultation and Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Raborg, U. S. Army, Retired, was invited to serve as Commandant. He accepted the invitation and organized the corps, using as officers students who had received adequate military training. He organized classes in Military Science, as well, following Army ROTC programs of study and using as instructors members of the faculty who were Reserve Officers or who had served in the Army.

The original purpose of the Corps was to serve primarily as a medium for teaching military drill to such students as might elect it. This purpose gradually evolved into a broader purpose of developing military leadership, and a systematic rotation of students in the various grades of command was instituted and successfully carried out. Students were given basic drill, then those students who were sufficiently experienced and who showed aptitude for command were given various opportunities to practice command as corporals, sergeants, lieutenants, and captains. They were further, given some training in the routine paper work of the Army and in preparation of plans for training.

Some 1,000 students have been members of the Carolina Volunteer Training Corps since its inception. Many of these men are now practicing the difficult art of war in Army, Navy, and Marine Corps. They write back to the CVTC that their training stands them in good stead, and they urge that the Corps go on with its program, intensifying training and discipline and giving students more and better preparation for military service.

However the CVTC is quite possibly bowing itself off the stage at Commencement time this year. It seems likely that there will be few men on the campus next year who are not in one or another of the Reserve organizations and subject to special disciplines and training curricula. There may not be further need for a Volunteer Student Training Corps.

Therefore the CVTC wishes here officially to take leave of the campus, perhaps for the summer, perhaps for all time. And in saying farewell it wishes to thank many men of the student body, of the Administration, of the Business office, of the Buildings Department, and of the Faculty who have in many ways and at many times helped to make the Corps a success. It wishes particularly to thank Dean House and Mr. Rogerson for their constant guidance and assistance.

The Corps is Carolina's own . . . Today former members of its ranks are fighting in the four corners of the globe . . . Others will soon join them.

To all—we—who stay behind, wish godspeed and good luck.

CORPS ROLL OF HONOR

The following men have been cited for distinguished service to the Corps and their names have been placed on the Roll of Honor: Joshua Henry Wisebram, E. Kedar Bryan, Robert Strudwick Glenn, James Fuller Dibrell, Thomas Benjamin Baden, Paul Archer Dulin.

NAVAL R. O. T. C.

THE 1942-43 YEAR was a big one for the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of North Carolina. And in many respects it was a hectic one.

The unit opened its third year on the campus with a membership of 226 select students, men who had passed the strict physical and mental examinations out of a competing field of more than 500.

Some difficulty was experienced in the location of suitable quarters for the unit. During the fall quarter classes were held in Swain Hall. Then it was decided that Swain, which had served as a cafeteria in the old days, would have to re-open to feed students, since the Pre-Flight School took over Lenoir Dining Hall.

Temporary class rooms were provided in Phillips while Captain W. S. Popham, commandant, set about to pull the formed into a band stand. The popular Negro Pre-Flight band provided the music for the dance, which was attended by all NROTC cadets and their dates, officers and their wives, and many dignitaries from throughout the State.

The main deck of the armory is used by the cadets for drill purposes. The floor is rigged by gun racks which hold the regular drill rifles used. At the west end of the floor is the bridge or upper deck. The level is twelve feet above the drill floor and is reached by a twin flight of stairs. Life preservers which hang from the front of the bridge lend a nautical touch to the setting.

A compass and binnacle, fully equipped, stand on the bridge, as do two propeller revolution indicators and a steering wheel from a modern U. S. destroyer. These are studied by all cadets. A section of the bridge is reserved for the staff of the Catapult, quarterly publication. Skipper Awalt, the Battalion Quartermaster, served as editor of the magazine during the year. The battalion executive committee also has quarters on the upper deck. The purpose of the executive committee is to work with commissioned officers in planning entertainments, parades, reviews, etc.

The lower deck of the new building is given over to class rooms. Also on the lower deck are a 4-inch gun loading machine, dummy 4-inch shells, a gun director removed from a destroyer damaged in the Pacific area, and the after-body of a torpedo, all of which are studied.

necessary strings in Washington and South Building to arrange for the construction of an armory.

Opening of the handsome brick building early in the winter quarter was easily the highlight of the busy NROTC year. Official dedication was observed on the occasion of the annual Navy dance. On this night the building was festooned with colorful signal flags. The bridge was trans-

The indoor rifle range is also located on the lower deck. The unit has a rifle team of considerable merit. The team won many matches during the spring, even defeating the sharpshooters of the Marine detachment of the Pre-Flight School.

John Paty was named Battalion Commander in the fall quarter. Charles Richmond served as Sub-Commander of the Battalion; Skipper Awalt as Battalion Quartermaster; and Tom Wadden as Battalion Adjutant. These executive cadet officers commanded the fall and spring drills on Emerson Field under the critical eyes of NROTC officers and Chief Petty officers.

During the fall quarter no rifles were used in drilling. But early in the winter quarter dummy rifles were provided and the unit underwent regular manual of arms training, in addition to classes in gunnery, seamanship and signalling on drill days in the winter when marching was impractical.

Each of the companies entered teams in unit competition and the unit as a whole participated in all phases of the intramural sports program. Company heads were: R. Kemp first company; John Robinson, second company; P. F. Simmons, third company; and W. Weatherford, fourth company. NROTC teams were impressive in intramural competition. During the fall quarter the teams won campus championships in water polo and boxing and the town dormitory championship in tag football. The volley ball crown was annexed in the winter quarter, and also the town dormitory championship in basketball. Softball laurels were added in the spring quarter.

A testimonial to the willingness of cadets to engage in competitive sport is the fact that 36 to 48 juniors, 45 of 69 sophomores, and 62 of 85 freshmen participated in intramurals during the year.

Participation in intramurals and other sports activities of the NROTC was elective with the exception of instruction in swimming. All cadets were required to be able to swim 220 yards, to stay afloat 15 minutes, to swim with an injured man for 25 yards, and to swim under water for 20 yards.

Success of the athletic program was due, in a large measure, to the work of Chief Specialist J. E. Rackley, US

The executive ability of NROTC cadets was reflected in the outcome of the spring elections. A sweeping percentage of the top campus offices went to Navy men. Cadets winning offices were: John Robinson, president of the student body; Junie Peel, secretary-treasurer of the student body; Karl Bishopric, editor of the YACKETY YACK; Buddy Crone, head cheerleader; Garrison Freeman, representative to the student legislature from the rising senior class; Denny Hammond, representative to the student council from the rising senior class; Ralph Strayhorn, president of the rising junior class; Johnny W. Davis, treasurer of the rising junior class; Mac Lane and Nick Long, representatives to the student legislature from the rising junior class; Reid Thompson, representative to the student council for the rising juniors; Bobby Broughton, representative to the student council from the rising sophomore class; and Charles Hackney, representative to the student legislature from the rising sophomore class.

SHOOTING THE SUN

CHIEF TAYLOR DEMONSTRATES SOME OF THE FINER POINTS OF THE THREE INCH FIFTY.

The NROTC was well represented on varsity teams. Seven men, including Chan Highsmith, all-southern center who was picked by the Associated Press as the "Sophomore of the Year" in the Southern Conference, were members of the first string football team. Two men were on the boxing team, one on the wrestling team, and several, including Crone, Southern Conference and National Intercollegiate diving champion, and Hammond, Southern Conference back stroke champion, on the crack Blue Dolphin swimming team. The unit was also represented on the baseball and track squads.

The drum and bugle corps of the NROTC was expanded during the year. Under the leadership of H. Fullenwider, the seventeen men composing the musical division performed on several occasions and received the commendation of officers and fellow cadets alike.

Aside from the annual dance, the highlight social event of the year was a smoker staged in the fall to strengthen social relations between the cadets and officers. The session was enlivened by a number of humorous talks and jokes. Movies dealing with Navy duty and sabotage were shown.

Most sweeping change in the NROTC program since its start will be effected on July 1 when all students enrolled in the unit will be classified as apprentice seamen, given regular base pay of $50 a month, moved into dormitories to be converted into barracks, and commanded to wear uniforms and abide by Navy discipline at all times.

The move will be in keeping with the provisions of the new V-12 program scheduled to get under way at that time. The program will involve all students now in the NROTC, V-1, V-7, and the other college Naval reserves.

Captain Popham's staff of officers for the year included the following: Commander G. L. Harriss, USN, executive officer; Lt. Comdr. F. W. Bruning, USN, drill officer; Lt. Comdr. H. W. Carroll, Jr., USNR, stores officer; and Lieutenant L. A. Rich, USNR, officer in charge of the freshman class, who replaced Lt. Comdr. Ethridge.

The enlisted personnel includes: Chief Yeoman M. L. Meeks, USN, in charge of the clerical staff; Chief Boatswain's Mate M. L. Taylor, USN, assistant to the drill officer; Chief Gunner's Mate J. O. UTSTANDING

*I*N EVERY PART OF CAROLINA CAMPUS LIFE there are men and women who have more than made the grade.

They are the quiet citizens who wear Phi Beta Kappa keys for their high achievements in scholarship. They are the men who were tapped in solemn ceremony by the Order of the Golden Fleece, or chosen to sit close-bound in fellowship and ideals of service about the round table of the Order of the Grail. They are the clear-eyed women who wear around their necks, in place of collegiate pearls, tiny golden helmets; the symbol of Valkyries.

These Carolina men and women have standards set for them which place them apart from others; they are the qualities of scholarship, leadership and service. These are the men and women who feel a real and sincere duty towards their school, who work, often without personal recognition, for integration among campus organizations, for smooth-functioning student government, for better student-faculty relations, for new ways to help others to find their place in the University. They work towards a common goal: to leave their Alma Mater better than they found it. These are the efficient ones who say, "The more you do the more you have time to do." They do not hold their honors lightly nor let them lose their meaning once they have been one.

In a wartime college where the rah-rah spirit is out of place, they continue to make college a place for growth, discovery and personal development. These are the men and women who are to Carolina "outstanding." They think of Carolina first.

THEY MORE THAN MADE THE GRADE

*A*N OUTSTANDING STUDENT. "He isn't Phi Beta but he just missed it by a point or two. He studied a lot but still we saw him at the dances and organization meetings. He got around, there is no doubt about that, but he still found time to get in a lot of book-learning. He ran on the philosophy that an education consists of forty per cent study and sixty per cent living."

Alpha Chapter of North Carolina

*T*O THE students on the campus privileged to wear the "Phi Beta" key, Phi Beta Kappa represents a minimum of eight full quarters of work in which a scholastic average of 92.5 or better has been maintained. Often content to rest on its laurels, the fraternity this year took a step forward as plans inaugurated last spring materialized in the form of a tutorial system. Under this plan members offered their services as tutors in their major subjects to those first and second year students who needed scholastic aid but were financially unable to get it.

Officers this year were: Arthur Watts Clark, President; John Mitchell Sorrow, Vice-President; John Andrew Feuchtenberger, Secretary; and Thomas James Wilson, Jr., Treasurer.

ALPHA EPSILON DELTA

ALPHA EPSILON DELTA, honorary Pre-Medical Fraternity, is composed of members selected for their character, general ability, and personality. Its chief object is to encourage excellence in pre-medical work, to bind together similarly interested students, and to act as a force in crystallizing any movement for the good of the pre-medical student. It seeks to bridge the gap between the spirit of the pre-medical school and that of the school of medicine.

Officers this year were: Duncan Devane Walker, Jr., President; Isaac Vaughn Manly, Vice-President; Dewey Hobson Winchester, Secretary; Richard Tatum Shugart, Treasurer; Francis Parker King, Corresponding Secretary; and Dr. R. W. Bost, Faculty Adviser.

Members: William Harrison Bell, Jr., Edwin Boyle, Lindsey Drayton Campbell, Walter Lee Crouch, Mark A. Griffin, James Andrew Harrell (Dental School), John Fox Kendrick, Gamewell Alexander Lemmon, Robert Kay Quinnell, Robert Spruill Spain, Frederick Arrowood Thompson, Jr., and Dewey Hobson Winchester.

BETA GAMMA SIGMA

*B*BETA GAMMA SIGMA, recognized by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business as the National honorary fraternity in university commercial education, was founded in 1913 and has 45 chapters. The local chapter, Alpha of North Carolina, was established in 1933. Undergraduate membership is limited to those who rank scholastically in the highest ten per cent of the graduating class and highest two per cent of the Junior Class.

Officers for the past year were: Kirby Moore, President; Professor R. J. M. Hobbs, Honorary President; Richard Jemson Jones, Jr., Treasurer; and Professor John E. Dykstra, Secretary.

Members: Lloyd Cleveland Bost, John A. Feuchtenberger, Mayer Pinkston Hendrix, Charlotte Ann Powers, Emanuel Rivkin, William Terrell Webster, Jr., and Harry Frederick Weyher.

LIVING

LIVING AT CAROLINA has been different. It hasn't been the ten-thirty coke period. It hasn't been roomy closets and double rooms. It hasn't even been leisurely lectures.

It has been a uniformed hurry to drill. A double load of physical education periods. Controversy over the freezing of student government. Cut on publication money of the YACKETY YACK, the Daily Tar Heel, and the Carolina Magazine. Lavishness of dance week-ends outlawed. Continual good-byes to friends leaving for various branches of the armed services. War stamps sold by the coeds in the Book Exchange. Piles of junk for the scrap drive. Newly planted grass guarded by "Please keep off of me" signs. Eighteen hundred Pre-Flight Cadets threaten the supremacy of the Carolina Gentlemen. The odious eight-thirties became more so when moved up to eight o'clock. Fewer flashy convertibles zooming by. Twelve o'clock curfew for beer sales. Cherished ration books for food, shoes, and that intoxicating "what-have-you." Cramped bus trips to home and the woman land, W. C.

But some things will go on unchanged. Dr. Frank's friendly "Hello." The leafy coolness of the arboretum. The organ recitals at the Chapel of the Cross. Graham Memorial, the hub of student activities. Dr. Woodhouse's "I don't care what you think, just so you think!" Old East, Old West, Spencer Hall. Wisteria-scented breezes and sudden showers. South Building, the home of the administration. Dr. Coffin Taylor's hogs, Goneril and Regan. Far-famed Carolina-Duke rivalry. The Old Well, campus tradition. The Bell Tower chiming "Hark the Sound"—LIVING in the hearts of all its men and women.

AFTER CLASSES, WHEN WE PLAYED

*I*N THE NEXT FEW PAGES are scenes from our after-classes life. None are meant to be typical, because there is no typical life at Carolina. The play is adapted to each student's tastes. The motto is: roll your own. Hayrides, dances, movies, beer parties, music under the stars, fireside concerts in Graham Memorial, fraternity parties, records, evenings in the booths downtown. Extra-curriculars predominate in the lives of many students.

HANDS ACROSS THE RIO.

“Goodbye

THE 1942-43 TERM finishes up one period in the history of this University. The customs, the good times, the life that has existed for the past 20 years ends this June with the almost complete militarization of the school.

Student government that has been derived after years of work on the part of student leaders will have to be suspended until that time when boys are again free to participate in government.

Publications have changed, will change even more because of slashed budgets, priorities, draft-riddled staffs. The Tar Heel that has grown from a weekly to a daily-except-Monday paper will necessarily deteriorate because of a lack of money and a lack of staff members. The Carolina Magazine and the YACKETY YACK have been limited to almost impossibly small budgets; next year they face complete abolition.

MIDNIGHT TOIL.

Fraternities, too, will soon be gone from Carolina. These organizations, noted for their good boys, good work, good parties, will give way before the necessary military organization of Carolina students.

Baseball, basketball and football teams will play only neighboring schools, for transportation difficulties rule out long distance traveling.

The student body of 1942-43 is witnessing the last chapter in one phase of Carolina life, a phase that has been characterized by progress, liberalism, good times and hard work.

RIGHT DRESS—COEDS IN CVTC

Carolina”

And they've made the most of this last year. Despite the many changes students, realizing the instability of campus life and activities, have tried to cram within nine months the type of living they may never know again.

For that reason this year has been a fast one. There has been no time to waste. Students worked hard, played hard, for this has been the last go-round.

The note of finality is sad; it is also promising. For after the war there will be more progress. Plans for freezing student government provide for improvements over the present set-up. Ideas that must now remain latent will be expressed after the war through the medium of publications.

"THE WHITE STAR OF SIGMA NU"

Boys and girls who haven't had a chance to party, or travel by car for several years will make the most of their college life by having fun.

And work will be done after the war to make Carolina a definite influence in shaping the post war world. From this University come the leaders of North Carolina. From North Carolina can come the leaders of America, and America's future looms large ahead.

Those who say goodbye this year to Carolina's established pattern of living realize their responsibility. They must plan for Carolina's future before they leave, must make the most of the remaining minutes left. It has changed—it will change more—but it is and will always be Carolina.

OVER THE FIRST HURDLE.

THE NAVY LENDS A HAND.

The old saying that the girls go for football heroes still holds good, but the girls also go for the baseball heroes and the basketball heroes.

Sporting life at the Hill plays a very large part in the lives of many students. It gives the quieter youths a chance for self-expression in a way that cannot be overlooked. Wasted afternoons have been turned into

*I*N SPITE OF THE WAR, sports, as usual, came in at the top of the list of extra-curricular activities this year. It is true that spectator sports are still the most popular among the majority of the students, but since the development of an extended intramural program and coed participation, coaches have noticed that the ranks of their hopefuls have been growing larger every year.

Football is still “King of the Hill,” but this past year saw boxing, basketball, track, and baseball also bringing in large crowds.

Students have realized that the object of the game is to win—but it is also to play hard, fair and square. This past year we had losing teams and we had winning teams, but always we had the same amount of enthusiasm, with spectators letting the players know that they were all behind them.

muscle builders, as freshmen, sophomores, juniors and even the lordly seniors stepped down from their pedestals and mixed it up in a hot game of basketball.

With the Navy Pre-Flight school leading the way, Physical Education instructors have been tougher, and many are the students who dread to see Monday morning come because of calisthenics.

All will agree, however, that these are war times and Uncle Sam has no use for softies. For that reason, students have entered wholeheartedly into the accelerated programs, and in the place of "slot-machine" muscles they have been showing the "real McCoy" around the campus.

That rope in Woollen Gymnasium is still mighty long, and a few clouds must be passed to reach the top, but it can be done and has been done. Students have developed the custom of "going down to the gym for a workout," and have amazed themselves by doing this very thing instead of playing a few hands of bridge or taking in another movie.

A "workout" is not wasted time. It is a good feeling to know that you "can take it" in order to show the rest of the gang that you can stack up with them on the playing field as well as the class room. Sports are here to stay, duration or no duration, and, remember this: if the football players get drafted, the students can always play!

THE FACTS OF LIFE?

night owls who roam the halls together while the rest of the inmates sleep peacefully on.

In their private conversations in the dorms the girls continue their former habits. For long hours they discuss men, plans after college, marriage, jobs, fraternity pins, parties, beliefs, ideals and dreams. It's typical, it's natural of dormitory life. Carolina is no exception.

"The Gentler

*F*OR 102 YEARS the phrase "rising generation" in the charter of the University of North Carolina was construed to mean boys only. When university heads realized that at least half of every rising generation was made up of girls, they changed their policies and opened the doors to coeds.

And now coeds are firmly established at Carolina. They have a life connected with the boys; they also have one separated.

Secure inside their dormitories at night coeds become once again members of a girls' school, just as they were before they reached Chapel Hill. The bull sessions are the same, the usual house meetings, necessary but monotonous, the same midnight snacks, and into-the-night bridge games, the usual number of

NO MAN'S LAND . . .

Sex...

Outside the dorms the coeds can find a separate life too. Girl's athletics offer softball, tennis, swimming, dancing for recreation. The CICA gives the gals a chance at organized politics, and student government is a medium through which girls can organize their life here as they want it.

But all is not separate. By working along with boys on extra-curriculars the coeds strengthen their own place at Carolina. Fulfilling definite jobs gives them a sense of belonging to the school that so long was for men only.

By living at Carolina, studying, playing, working away at their own organizations and in campus groups the coed distinguishes herself from the girls who merely visit Carolina. Coeds are not week-end guests who travel down for parties, for amusement. Carolina means more to them than that. They are members of the Carolina community, girls who remain from Monday to Thursday as well as from Friday to Sunday.

To them belonging is better than visiting. And they do belong—in classes, in the library, in the Y at 10:00, on parties, at Carolina 24 hours a day.

BRIDGE OR POKER?

“The Dorms

*I*N DAYS PAST dormitories have played a major role in life at Carolina, but things are changing. This year dormitory life has been characterized by suspense. Boys did not know when they might be asked to vacate a building for the Navy or the meteorology school on twenty-four hour notice. By July only one civilian dorm will be left open; the others will house Navy and Marine reserves.

But boys can look back to the days when going home to the dormitories at night was the finishing touch to an evening. Poker games into the night will not soon be forgotten. With that All-American game for entertainment generations of boys have sat up into the night, smoking, dealing from the bottom, trying to out-bluff roommates, to win the next week's spending money.

Those poker games, too, have resulted in outstanding bull sessions. Girls, parties, football, sex, liquor, favorite coeds, ESQUIRE, jokes... these have been discussed into the morning hours.

That Were”

And practical jokes come in for their share in dormitory life: firecrackers thrown in the halls, pails of water waiting for an unsuspecting victim, false phone calls, barricaded doors. These make life in boys' dorm interesting, amusing.

Petty drawings on the wall, a glamorous picture of the favorite gal back home and unanswered letters from the family on desk tops, clothes thrown on every bed and chair, books dumped carelessly on the floor . . . these show up in a snapshot of a dormitory room.

Meeting the boys is the biggest advantage of living in a dorm. There one finds a complete cross section of the Carolina student; those who play, those who work, campus BMOC's, politicians, green young freshmen. They all live together and learn different attitudes of life.

Dormitories that for decades have housed carefree and serious students alike will change into disciplined barracks, under military rule. But boys in the future, as boys in the past, will again know dormitory life and return at reunions as so many have done to visit the rooms in which they had so much fun, rooms where they met their fellow students, rooms in which they got a good deal of their education.

PRAISE ALLAH!

FRAT BOYS PLAY SERIOUS BRIDGE.

Greek letter men remember the hectic rushing days, the relief of shaking up boys the fraternity wanted, having pledges run errands, initiation ceremonies, fraternity serenades to newly pinned up girls, fraternity songs and parties.

And then there's the friendly rivalry between fraternities, adding interest to intra-

“Good

*T*O MANY Carolina gentlemen fraternity life is one of the fundamental parts of college. In fraternities they find congenial friends . . . ties that bind them to Carolina. For in fraternities boys find a definite way of life. Brothers know each other well, meet daily for meals, date and party together, invite imports down for fraternity house parties.

Fraternity life means close friendships, support, co-operation. When a Carolina student knows he's not by himself, that his whole fraternity is backing his every effort, he has the confidence needed to make a success of life at Carolina.

Buddies”

mural softball games and basketball, offering a basis for arguments, giving the coeds something to wrangle about.

Fraternity hayrides, beer parties, dances and week-ends at the beach have long played an important role in Carolina life. For boys and for their dates these occasions have been the highspots of college. These are what they talk about in conversations about the good old days.

After graduation fraternities link former students to Carolina more than any other tie.

THE DKES GET A WISH.

13 CLUB AMUSES THE CROWD.

On football week-ends the old grads find their biggest pleasures in visiting once more the house they called home in Chapel Hill.

Fraternities add a secure feeling to life at Carolina. They're always there, something to count on, something to work for. Through fraternity life come the closest of friendships, the most successful group action.

For the duration of the war fraternities will probably be absent from Carolina. They don't mix with militarized education. But after the war they will return, for they add a touch to Carolina life that is hard to find by any other means.

REMEMBER THE PHI GAM SIDESHOW . . .

AND THOSE GREAT PARTIES AT THE MEADOW . . .

Football is not the only factor that makes Carolina a typical large university. Organized parties, hayrides to Hogan's Lake or excursions to Shorty's cabin seem to belong between the covers of LIFE magazine. Baseball games before dinner, long lines of hungry couples grouped around the picnic table, and singing around a fire after dinner . . . all are typical of schools everywhere, of Carolina.

“And When

STUDENTS FIND at Carolina a synthesis of the big university and the small school. The advantage, the activities of both types of schools are here combined.

Fun by mass production methods characterizes the fall season. Carolina dons its big university atmosphere and struts out to Kenan stadium to cheer against Duke. Rameses, the bad, glamorous cheer leaders and a drum majorette fit into the ordinary conception of life at a large university. From the stands comes the rah-rah type of school spirit. Carolina, puffed up with pride over the beauty of Kenan stadium, the number of students and alumni present, and the khaki filled section of the grandstand assumes the air of a big time institution.

AND THE LONG WAIT BETWEEN RIDES?

We Play”

When winter comes the parties grow smaller. No longer can they be held outdoors where numerous people can gather easily. Inside the crowd becomes more select. On winter week-ends small groups of people gather all over the campus, in fraternity houses, sorority houses, Harry's, Marley's, the Pines, Graham Memorial, to listen to music, talk, smoke endless cigarettes, relax before roaring fires, in easy chairs.

AND WE'LL NOT FORGET THE RAMESES INCIDENT . . .

. . . OR THOSE THREE MUSKETEERS.

And then Carolina becomes the small school. Rumors spread from group to group; everyone knows how everyone else is spending the winter. As it rains, snows or blows outside the feeling of coziness and congeniality that belongs to a little school settles over Carolina.

Long conversations take place over coffee in the Campus cafe, over beers in Jeff's. The atmosphere is more subdued; girls are in sophisticated black while boys are dressed in heavy tweed suits. Things seem smaller as they grow quieter.

In spring these two trends are combined. Parties, activities come in large and small sizes. And that is Carolina. It is big, it is small, to suit your tastes, your way of living.

INTERFRATERNAL

WITH THE EXCEPTION OF FRANK GRAHAM, Carolina fraternities have been more widely condemned perhaps than any other University institution. But for over half a century now, they have persisted, and will for many more.

Sometimes the criticism has been merited; just as often it hasn't. Fraternities in the '20's and early '30's showed none too clean a record. There were the bars and bootleggers and moosemilk lawn-parties on Columbia Street. There was the monopoly on student offices and a barrier of near-snobbishness that barred non-fraternity men from campus social life. But the alcoholism and campus caste system were only a reaction, and no more characteristic of fraternity men than was the concurrent irresponsibility of the nation toward inevitable World War II.

Late in the last decade the barriers began to fall, dropped voluntarily and were broken down by the inroads of a new strong union of dormitory men. Fraternities, and sororities too, have adjusted themselves as part of town and campus community. They have put strength into their governments—the Interfraternity and Pan-Hellenic Councils. They have contributed and worked generously in the drives, provided scholarships, adjusted conduct to the realization that Chapel Hill was a community and not a resort.

To a once-hostile state and an often hostile faculty they have proven that there is much difference between a frat and a fraternity.

Within the month, most, if not all of them, will close their doors and turn their houses over to naval occupation for the duration of the war. It will be the crucial test, for war can only either disintegrate those institutions intrinsically weak or strengthen those that are strong. If the freedom of the individual to choose his associates, and the ties of deep friendship are strong enough to survive without the uniting factors of fraternity houses, then fraternities will still be here.

They came through one war. They will come through another.

THESE GREEKS AREN'T STARVING YET

*T*HE SCENE DEPICTED ABOVE IS the one most people have a natural reaction to conjure up when fraternities are mentioned. But the day of the speakeasy has passed and with it went the fraternity's reputation for being a house of drunkards.

Fraternities had a hard time this year. Next year will see the Navy in possession of most of the fraternity houses. Nevertheless, the spirit of the fraternity will live on and the day of final victory will see it once more established as one of the inspiring experiences in a Carolina student's life.

INTER-FRATERNITY COUNCIL

OSBORNE

WEBB

FOR THE FIRST TIME in the history of the Council it functioned for the summer session as well as the winter session and had two presidents—each serving for about six months. School, during the summer of 1942, was about as much like the regular sessions as two peas in a pod—except, of course, for the additional use of the arboretum. Since so many students remained for the summer session the fraternities functioned as normal which necessitated the Council assuming full duties.

Starting off with a bang the new Council secured permission for coeds to visit fraternity houses during the summer. This was the first time such a summer agreement had been reached with the "powers that be" and called for hours of conferences and the writing of a new coed agreement.

The new agreement set up a House Privileges Board, composed of representatives from the Inter-Fraternity Council and also from the Woman's Student Government. The function of this Board was to act as a clearing house for discussion and recommendations on violations of the Coed Agreement. The whole idea was aimed at decreasing the number of rules and at increasing the compliance with the spirit of the Agreement. The Board worked excellently—having to deal with only one violation during the summer session.

During the summer the Council worked on the time-old ideas of buying food through the University Business Office and of getting the local taxes removed. Osborne and Webb made several trips in connection with these ideas but in the end had to shelve the plans due to the inadvisability of pushing them to their logical conclusion at that time.

A rejuvenated fraternity booklet was ready for the fall freshmen when they arrived—having the distinctive feature of a map of the fraternity houses. The new men would no longer go to the Carolina Inn and ask if it were the Phi Gam or some other fraternity house—instead they consulted the map.

The most changed thing which greeted the fall rushees was the streamed-line rush period. The Council felt that if rush week was moved closer to the opening of the fall quarter it would not interfere seriously with studies and that six days was long enough for the freshmen to become acquainted with the chapters on the campus. Consequently on the second Sunday of the fall quarter the great "week" opened, closing on Friday night at 12 midnight. At this time dead silence enclosed fraternity and rushee until Sunday at 2 o'clock. That was the time the new men went to the houses of their choice. This shortened rush period certainly proved an advantage over the older ten-day system.

In line with war and space economy the Inter-Fraternity Council sponsored a dance during the fall quarter honoring the pledges of all the fraternities here at Carolina. This dance took the place of the individual dances usually held by the houses and saved the house about $2,000.00 collectively.

The summer House Privileges Board was continued during school year and given additional power. This power is to hear and render decisions on fraternity houses violating the Coed Agreement—this power previously having been held by the Executive Committee of the Council. This Board has enjoyed excellent success and seems to be a step forward in solving the coed problem.

Somewhat in conjunction with the Inter-Fraternity Council the defunct Fraternity House Managers' Association was reorganized under the direction of the Council. The organization, though hard working, was able to accomplish little because of the increasing shortage of foodstuffs and the decreasing membership of fraternities.

The next big problem which the Council faced was the problem of providing space badly needed by the University in order to house naval trainees. This problem is far from being settled at time of writing. The Council has had to consider the terms on which it would rent the fraternity houses to the University. If the houses are rented to the college it will mean an entirely new fraternity set-up here at Carolina. Already this year two houses have felt that they could no longer buck the decreasing membership and increasing cost of operating a fraternity house and have consequently bowed out of the picture. The fraternity set-up during the war at best looks dark.

Officers were Buck Osborne and H. D. Webb, Jr., Presidents; Lanier Branson, Vice-President; "Jeep" Harvey, Treasurer; Mac Bell, Secretary.

The Executive Committee was composed of H. D. Webb, Jr., Buck Osborne, Mac Bell, Lee Levine, Floyd Cohoon, Junius Davis and Lanier Branson.

Dear Brothers at Home and Abroad:

In spite of the stress and strain of the times, we are still very much alive and clinging to our ideals true to Beta tradition. As you know, this year we celebrate our ninety-first anniversary, having survived two wars and still going strong in the third!

We know that you will take justifiable pride in knowing that most of the boys that you selected for brothers have been chosen by Uncle Sam and are now in training for or have already received their commissions. While we are proud of this, we feel that no such distinction can offset the loss of even a single Beta. Particularly hard to take were the deaths of a former president, Lieut. Harry Winkler of the Army Air Forces, and Thomas Bledsoe.

The past year saw many of our usual social activities curtailed, but we were allowed to have our spring house party. Parade magazine selected Carolina as the typical university and the Betas as the typical fraternity for a pictorial spread on fraternity house-parties. Pictures were taken during May Frolics.

Rushing period was shortened this year, but we still think we got the "cream of the crop," and if all goes well, we hope to add twenty-three new Betas to our roll this year.

Once again we celebrated Christmas by entertaining the little underprivileged children of Chapel Hill at our annual Christmas party. Santa Claus with a full pack, spread joy and happiness among our little guests, and we provided ice cream and cake.

Sorry our letter can't be longer, but this is all the space allotted us. So good luck and Godspeed—to all of our Beta Brothers everywhere.

Yours in,
—kaí—

THE WAR took many of our boys, both brothers and pledges, but Chi Phi remained very much the same.

Who can ever forget the hayrides, the house parties that weren't "house parties," the gang gathered around the piano singing to "Tiny" Hutton's music, the perpetual bridge game, "Oot" Prince and his defense of Lee, Jack Lindsay with his nose on the ground, the gang around the bar at Marley's, the chances anyone took in bringing a date around to the house, "Sloppy and Moe's Bar," groping around a dark, cold house before the 8 o'clock class, p. j. parties, the training table for the basketball teams, P. Green's boogie woogie, Leon, and everything else that made 300 South Columbia what it is?

Brother Lindsay was on the Student Entertainment Committee, along with Pledge Alspaugh; Dick Whittington headed the IRC Gallup poll for the nation, while Brother Tepper was national head of the Intercollegiate Literary Survey. Practically everyone in the house took part in at least one of the Sound and Fury shows, even though we didn't have "Orson" Grotz to inspire us in this direction. "Tiny" Hutton was on the Social Committee, along with his work in the Di Senate, Sound and Fury, Margaret, and everything else.

College is said to be the best years of one's life. We realized it and made the most of it.

WHAT WITH BRIGADIER-GENERAL HERSHEY giving some of the boys at Chi Psi the nod, the ranks at the Lodge became somewhat depleted. A few of the brothers beat the General to the draw by enlisting in the several other branches. Three of the brothers are in the Navy Air Corps (two of whom were subjected to the tortures of the obstacle course here at Carolina). The Army Air Corps has a couple of lieutenants who up until last October wore the Chi Psi pin where they now wear their wings. The Navy walked away with all the honors by luring into its folds the grand total of six boys.

The year found the brothers more industrious and slightly hesitant about wandering down to M——y's. However, when house party time came around the boys laid aside their books without too many misgivings and engaged in the spirit (and spirits) of the occasion. The fall house party is to be particularly remembered. It took place on the Duke-Carolina week-end, and among the events of the three days were the Fall Germans, a beer party that lasted through the night until it collided with breakfast, and a Sunday morning punch party. Seriously, though, the festivities of the year (which were none too numerous) were significant mainly because they will stand out as the high spots of Carolina days for those brothers whose education was interrupted when they answered the call to the colors.

WE'LL ADMIT IT—we had a few good laughs this year: The redecoration of the Boolor Lounge, home of the ineffectual CLS and Red Dawg (full-grown men cry for it), and the scene of Artemus' barfly's last stand and the amazing saga of Lizzard's trip into Ubangi-land in the interests of the Crispy-Crunchy Co.; Quickie Day, when Georgia Tech sent us into paroxysms of wholesome recreation; the success of Widelow's footballers, due to a fine physical condition brought about by the efforts of our Scottish trainer, Harry MacKlin; the Duquesne game that heard the air rent with great cries of "Rah!" and saw Yankee frosh fall beneath the vengent cane of Dreever; Fall Germans, the return of Old Baub from the Punic Wars laden with various bottled goodies, and the performance of that eminent salon group, The Bull City Nook Hawks; the expedition to Charlottesville for the Virginia game, chaperoned by the noted author, "Uncle Joe" Thompson (Ram vs. Religion, Ramble House, 1902), and by Herb Ancrum Munhall; the annual fire extinguisher check in the winter quarter; the Deke-St. A. beer-baseball party, held in the dead of winter without baseballs, when Teles, without malice, pulverized the powder room's main attraction.

UNCLE TONY'S men, ever eager to do their part, accomplished in an unprecedented period of time a remarkable conversion. The former "Harry's for beer, Kostelanetz at 4:30 set" has been shamefully driven from our halls, to be replaced by a group of hard-hitting, ever-industrious little beavers. This lightning-like change has featured such metamorphoses as closets to machine shops, revellers to riveters, and old Haig and Haig bottles to grease guns. The capital agreement for this monstrous undertaking was made possible through a reciprocal agreement between Macklin's, Ltd., and St. Anthony, Un-Ltd., on a beers for bombers basis. These bombers, pouring daily from our assembly lines in the basement of the Annex and taking off for Russia from the runway in the back yard, have caused nationwide applause. Secretary Knox personally unfurled the Army and Navy "E" which floats above our plant, stating in his speech, "Boys, Kaiser's a piker."

DESPITE THE FACT that quite a few of our brothers have answered the call to arms, some voluntarily and some "otherwise," this has been our most successful year at Delta Sigma Pi.

The new year began successfully with "Smitty" taking the reins as headmaster. We emerged from rush season with fifteen top-notch pledges. We'll never forget "Hell Week," nor will the pledges.

We'll always remember: "Twinkle Toes" Calligan trying to find a new dancing partner, or is it "dancing" partner? . . . "Cy" Berluti going all the way to Florida for a date. . . . "Assume the angle, G. B.," quote Bogasse. . . . "Father" George explaining why he had weiners for dinner instead of steak. . . . "Hard to get" Spence falling for "Quite Contrary" Mary from W. C. . . . "Zoot Suit" Kimbrough wondering how he'll get a "drape shape" and a "rect pleat" out of G. I. Khaki. . . . "Ummmm, she might "Craver and I'll raise you" Knight getting dates for the more innocent. . . . "$30" Pigford wishing he was still a member of the "Stock Exchange." . . . "Pete" Stroud finally deciding that he'll give Uncle Sam his services. . . . Smitty orating and Bogasse giving him hell. . . . "Wolf" Austell going wild over Stella. . . . "Banker" Clark "Bumping" a dime. . . . Watching the pledges run wild as drill day and "Shine 'em up" Freeman come around. . . . "Judge" Bost laying down the law. . . . "Beef" Bales voting "like sign." . . . "What the Hell" Barnes giving military orders at 1:00 a. m. . . . "Trouble" Carden giving 20 rocks. . . . "Harmonizing" Hill singing "A Song of Cities." . . . "Soft-talking" Hutchins catching up with Craver. . . . "Politico" Morgan meeting the new coed. . . . "East-side" Rosenast down South. . . . "G. B." Taylor preaching farmer's philosophy. "Are You Qualified?"

Things we rarely see: Preston White at chapter meeting. . . . Sam Cox praising the South. . . . Jim Davis not smiling. . . . Dave Fiske with a date. . . . Fred Oehler meeting an 8:00. . . . "Mercenary" Warren not wanting to borrow a dollar. . . . John A. Wilson in a boisterous mood. . . . Roger Anderson without his pipe. . . . Bill Callihan with a tie. . . . Walker Freel with a fresh haircut. . . . Bill Spruill coming around to the house.

Faculty: Dr. H. D. Wolf.

SEVENTY K A's start off the year with high hopes and more than double their number with twenty-two pledges. "Little Brown Beaver" pitches in with his social program—hayrides, a dance, parties for the sororities. Huntley and the wolves swing into action and cries of "ah ooo" rise from the dark corners of the house. Bull sessions break out on the second floor with rapid spontaneity. Feild wants more quiet for study, but then nothing ever suits him. Cobb, Grand Guardian of the Multi-colored Rameses, struggles in after an exhausting and fruitless day over the wash tub. "R. S." Bell, frequent week-end visitor in Greensboro, accuses his roommate journalism major H. M. (His Majesty) Bell of not being in school. "Ike" Belk demonstrates his social aplomb by successfully having two dates for Fall Germans. The brothers leave the house for the 1:30 lab down on Franklin Street to see Errol Flynn in "Desperate Journey"; for Carrboro to see "Stella"; for the gym to see "Leg Art" Urquhart in action—Sebrell Johnson leaves for Atlanta without a trace. Winter quarter opens with Piller, Tate, T. Urquhart, Yancey and Gentry missing. Poverty-stricken, pneumo-thorax Herty sponges off the brothers while waiting for his father to come across. "D. A." Shuping turns the tables on legal-eagle "Studdo" Page and urges punishment to the fullest extent of the law. "Dauntless Dan" and C. C. submit to tonsorial operations and emerge as the clipped "Mole" and the "Curse, Old Thing." Politicos "Cleaver Haid" Tisdale and Buck Kerr finally settle party differences. Huntley takes over dictatorship as Mack Bell prepares to leave.

*N*INETEEN FORTY-TWO TO FORTY-THREE was an exciting year for Kappa Psi. We carried on the best we knew how under war restrictions, and although we might not have done the things we should have, time will show improvement.

Look-alikes . . . Bill Allen and "Shot" Cox (yellow hair—not much in front—and profiles); . . . "Luke" Irwin received a back injury from sources unknown(?) . . . Duke and Carolina aren't complete antagonists, look at Henley and Becky Britt? In Raleigh? Why? (Uhm-m-m) Reavans, your trip to Durham was complete. Try again. . . . "Duck" Pickard hooked something in Hookertown. . . . "B. B. Eyes" Boone's song is "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot?" . . . Seen "Triple-dip" Borders dance? . . . Red Eye Honor Roll includes Whitehead, Morton, "Woo-Woo" Viall, Montesanti, Rosser. . . . Why did Tart buy a bag in Durham? Coming back loaded? . . . "Foreman" Allen of Lenoir fame—acquiring added prestige as Assistant to the Dean, and we know who his competition in class is. . . . Brightly gleams our own "Moon" Beam. . . . Estes, what is the difference between Durham and Louisburg?

- A is for All-round best in sports, politics, and fun.
- L is for Lessons, which in spite of bull sessions and Bulluck, always get done.
- P is for Parties; take Mid-winters for example.
- H is for Headaches after parties which are always ample.
- A is for Athletics in which Sigler, Croom, Wright, Roska, Rose, Leblanc, Bulluck, and Faircloth are worth their weight in gold.
- M is for Mole.
- U is for University of North Carolina where Kappa Sigma has been operating for exactly fifty years.
- O is for Old Gobbler Henry Merritt, who's been Major Domo as long as Kappa Sigs have been here, and who is good for a long time yet, it appears.
- F is for Famous Kappa Sigs like Bert Bennett, the persuasive talker.
- K is for Knicknames such as "Greasy" Spoon, "K-Boy" Croom, "Spider" Webb, "Shorty" Shugart, "Champ" Cordon, "Togo" Philpott, "B-B-Eyes" Hunter, "Curly Heart" Hall, and "Professor" Walker.
- A is for Appetites like Faircloth and Cordon who try to see which one is the biggest eater.
- P is for Pins, like those being worn by Frances, Nancy, Ann, Betty, Sis, Edith, Ann, and Jeeter.
- P is for the Pilgrimage to Greensboro every week-end which Paschal, Rube, Doc, Webb, Haywood, and Billy Mac make for the sake of love.
- A is for "A" Cards which aren't any good and which left Webb's convertable high and dry and which Pinky's Blue Meteor still gets about in spite of.
- S is for the Seven o'clock reveille which is ignored because nobody gets up until ten minutes of eight and maybe not then.
- I is for Indoor sports such as battleship, bridge, hot-feet, short-sheets, and stag affairs on the week-end.
- G is for Gone to the Army like Les, J. V., Joe, Thad, Toga, Fish, Bum, Dad, and anybody else they can get.
- M is for Midnight Oil which hasn't been rationed at the Kappa Sig house yet.
- A is for Auld Lang Syne which is just around the corner for most of us.

Put them all together and they spell Alpha Mu of Kappa Sigma, a real brotherhood of boys who have worked and played together this year and who will never forget the wonderful times they had in this fiftieth year of the Chapter's history. May there be many more such years to come!

ROLLING PILLS for the Pharmacy Profs during the week, and rolling to Greensboro oo week-ends—that was the regular routine for the embryo pharmacists of Phi Delta Chi this year between sessions with the respective draft boards, trying to get them to see us as essential citizens. If Teague gets another deferment, he'll be over the age limit. "Slickest Operator" of the year was Housemanager Sessoms, while Tony and President Ed seemed to be steadfast bachelors. Most studious were "Cousin" Charlie, "Doc" Dameron, and Hollowell. "Preacher" and Mac, our married brothers, seem to be blissfully happy.

Note of sadness was sounded when Brother Fred Dees was killed in crash of Army bomber of which he was co-pilot. Brighter spots were the parties and the success of intramural teams under Manager Canaday, roommate of best dressed Red Richardson. Shields' bike and Riggsbee's car turned out to be only forms of transportation. So Pledges Dees and Hege often made nocturnal food forays for the brothers, especially Rachide and Caruthers."

RETURNED THIS FALL to find old standbys Matthew, Joe, and Wharton's "bargain." . . . Streamlined rush season ends and we pledge the freshmen's 30 best. . . Mrs. Van, new housemother and staunch friend of Eleanor and the Democrats, endears herself to the brothers old and new. . . Christmas comes and in a Christmas party we bid farewell to Gingham Dahlin', and Gus. . . Gus gets a reprieve, however, and pops up after vacations to lead various and sundry crusades. . . Pledge dance Bowery ball is "traditional" and the wolves did howl and the beer was present and accounted for. . . And then Hell Week with a mass exodus of the moths. . . And follows one of the largest formal initiations in N. C. Beta's history. . . And more military calls gets Brothers Stoddardt and Tandy. . . The Phis wax melodious in the neighborhood of one edifice known as Alderman as Brothers Lindsey and Robey become courageous and the Swords and Shields find new homes. . . Dr. Omar orders a new copy of Jacoby for us in the all night sessions in the date room and initiates new members in the mysteries of the pasteboards. . . Little Scoop and Chief Sloan have troubles via the DTH. . . And the year closes with Carolina Phis at Carolina getting ready to join those already spread throughout the globe.

The Deac and Francis, Heeb and Wank,
 Gildersleeve, the mighty Fink,
 Goot and Stinky, Punjab too,
 All their movie-goin' crew,
 Tyrone, Mac and Sleepy Bill,
 Child Raymond comes to Chapel Hill,
 The Sim, Mees Meldred, Admir'l Jawn,
 Weblet Jr.—our Don Juan,
 Mighty Jimbo, Straggler Van,
 Crusher Morley—what a man!
 "Cuttin'" Hutton—lots of fight,
 Tonto Neblett's appetite,
 Mehoof and Smitie—Wilkie's gal,

Flammin' Raymond—Tatum's pal,
 Son and "B. G."—Farmer Hall,
 "Phi" and Clyde and faithful Paul,
 Link and Mongroë—Hammer's nose,
 All our frosh politicoes,
 Nick and Snow Hill, Josh and Raleigh,
 The Poker Club—Coach Parsley's folly,
 "A Toast" and songs of Queenie's fame,
 Old Epsilon's Owl—the great Duke game,
 The war—and Fijis flock to try,
 To keep our colors flying high,
 All these come back to us when we,
 Re-hash the days of '43.

“C’EST LA GUERRE” and many of the members of Lambda Chapter of Phi Kappa Sigma are now serving our country as members of the armed forces. One of our watchwords is “Once a Phi Kapp, Always a Phi Kapp.” This goes for men on land, in air and on the sea; we hope that many of our boys may return after the war and be welcomed by the Skull and Bones flying above our house.

The past year is one that will be long remembered by all of us. Although many of our boys left and many more expect to leave, we still had an enjoyable year with many outstanding events taking place.

The Skull and Bones (Chapter Publication) was published every quarter. The annual pledge banquet was held at the house in the fall with Dr. I. H. Manning as guest speaker. Our fall house party was given in place of the usual pledge dance. This was a big success. We had our annual Christmas party in December. Our winter house party was given the week-end of Junior-Seniors in February.

Mrs. Andrews, the Chapter Housemother, added that extra touch to all our social events. All in all, we enjoyed ourselves this year.

*D*ESPITE A WARTIME school year, it was as full of fond memories as any of the others. What a year, with . . . A hectic Rush Week ushering in 18 pledges. . . Dawson becoming Tau's first "housemother." . . Hatch rolling up in a new convertible the afternoon we tied Duke. . . That terrific Highball party. . . Pecora, still our favorite football player. . . Aird becoming a twosome. . . All those Raleigh boys, strong in number. . . Czar Bell nursing his "pet" back to health. . . Turner being elected football captain. . . "Neck" Heartfield, two letters a day. . . "Muscles" Temple guzzling milk. . . Carr making Who's Who. . . Quincy, the best dressed, leading the way in intramurals. . . Storey being elected Frosh president. . . "Talking Blues" Harshaw becoming THE M. C. on the campus. . . Furr changing. . . Capel standing by with typewriter. . . Jard becoming semi-athletic. . . The fury of Hell Week. . . Good-looking Moke Williams prom-trotting. . . The suave draft-dodgers. . . Cartwright chasing a pledge. . . Griffin shuffling off to Greensboro. . . Mills and Clark, Inc. . . Harding's last flings. . . Greathouse and his problems. . . Touloupas' hair holding its own. . . Fields, his students' favorite. . . And not one, but two editions of Tau Trends.

Actives: Robert Alexander Aird, Jr., Robert Henry Bell, Glenn Edwards Bogasse, Frank Winfred Capel, William Jarvis Cartwright, Jr., Lawrence Clyde Clarke, III, George Robert Dawson, Quint Eugene Furr, Bill Proctor Greathouse, Maurice William Griffin, Milton Compton Harding, Moses Richard Harshaw, Jr., Hurst Bunn Hatch, Jr., Lloyd Marshall Jard, Jr., Charles Kiersted MacDermut, Jr., Clifton Edwards Mills, John Louis Pecora, Robert Gordon Quincey, John Hulet Temple, Charles Leon Thomas, Jr., John Zacharias Touloupas, Moke Wayne Williams, Jr.

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FORTY-TWO-NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FORTY-THREE for North Carolina Omega Beta—the thirty-fourth of 38 chapters throughout the United States and Canada, has certainly been a momentous one. We've spent a year in the midst of world strife—sticking together, stopping every few weeks to say good-bye to one of the fratres as he leaves to serve his country, and throwing wide the door to welcome alumni who drop in to see us from nearby camps.

The year has been a good one nevertheless. The national emergency has made all the Pi Lams realize that the friendships we build up now will be really worth having—here at school, in the war, and in later life.

So we've pitched into scrap drives and pitched into house parties. We've entered campus activities of all forms and won and lost some intramural games. We've taken off for distant points and different women—though, only to return to the hill and the realization of the really swell things we have here.

We've tried to reach that seldom attained goal of mixing work of the serious kind that builds worlds and peace and play of the kind that makes men, in the right proportions—so that we can do our part in whatever is asked of us.

We don't know what the future has waiting for us, but we offer a heavy vote of thanks to the purple and gold and the blue and white for what they have given for this year and forever.

BROTHERS, will you remember—

Massa Moonhead presiding over nightly sessions of the "blow-it-out" club . . . Booboo talking about the "Charleys of Chapel Hill" and sometimes telling the same joke twice . . . "Hard Times" Gray, a changed man overnight . . . Osborne and his perennial hair-twisting . . . Swindal, the polo-shirt kid, shaving without a blade in his razor . . . "Monty" Crawford reminiscing over his lost youth, Doonie reminiscing over his lost hair, and Forrester occasionally going to a movie . . . Huber giving everybody hell about everything . . . "Major" Glenn philosophizing during the week and promoting bigger and better spin-the-bottle games on the week-ends . . . Big Dave, already domesticated . . . Troutmouth jumping on everyone and worrying about what would happen to S. A. E.'s standing when he left . . . Turnip trying to keep his love affairs straight . . . Murchison getting legal experience trying to keep the brothers out of the local pen. And can you forget Mallison with his "yellow jaundice" shirt settling the affairs of the world . . . the West House gang trying all year to get coed permission and getting the C. V. T. C. instead . . . Chet saying "strike lightning!" . . . Steve Peck crooning, wolfing, and promoting the "fall-down-the-steps" club . . . Geechie taking accounting . . . Captain adjutant Zero, leading scorer of that red hot number two basketball team . . . Michelle and his square jobs . . . Tubby trying to get more sleep . . . Mose, the quiz kid, running around to meetings . . . "Boat" Myrick drawing shapely gals and winning the home-coming prize . . . Massenburg giving fatherly advice to wayward gals . . . Rookie Wood's social functions, and Hose Nose's wisecracks . . . Minor's antics . . . those well-worn expressions—"don't worry about it," "low grade," and "Neez?" . . . the nights we made Milwaukee famous . . . our lasting band—"our bonds celebrating 'til death separating . . ."

SONNET TO SIGMA NU

Let's drink another toast to Sigma Nu!
 We'd do it every night but for a shortage
 Of whiskey and the fact we fear old age.
 We'd toast a thousand things before we're through.
 So here's to brother Baden tried and true,
 To Snapback Stanback and to Shorty Sears,
 And Cocky Joe—a snake for many years.
 Then here's to brotherhood and honor, too;
 The five-armed star with glorious days to pass,
 And here's to Yank McCoach and Floyd Cohoon
 And all the boys who'll join the army soon.
 We can't forget the graduating class,
 But we could think of toasts from morn 'til night,
 Just anything to Sigma Nu's all right.

STRAY GREEKS

THE SO-CALLED STRAY GREEKS, coming to the campus from fraternal organizations not formally organized at the University, constitute a considerable proportion of Carolina's sorority population. Recognized only by the Pan-Hellenic Council through an annual tea and formal dance, the Stray Greeks have long suffered at Chapel Hill through lack of organization and want of proper facilities for conducting meetings and social events.

The Stray Greek element makes up fully 25% of the Tar Heel sorority contingent and during the past year included coeds from Alabama, William and Mary, Tennessee, Ohio State, Georgia, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, St. Lawrence, Lawrence College, Duke, Stetson, Maryland, Randolph-Macon, Brenau, Florida State, Adelphia, Middlebury, Washington University, Washington College and George Washington. Sororities represented included Kappa Psi, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Delta Delta Delta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Delta, Zeta Tau Alpha, Gamma Phi Beta, Phi Mu, Phi Sigma Sigma, Iota Alpha Pi, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Omicron Pi, Alpha Phi Sigma, Delta Phi Sigma, Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Zeta and Delta Gamma.

PAN-HELLENIC COUNCIL

*A*S A LINK between the three sororities and the administration, the Pan-Hellenic Council has kept the women's Greek organizations in tune with a wartime campus. Instead of a gala Pan-Hellenic Ball, the only social function this year was an all-coed tea. Rushing expenditures were cut down. A two hundred dollar scholarship was given to the most deserving girl with which to finish her college career. Mass meetings, a scholarship cup for the sorority with the highest average, inter-sorority activities,—all these are part of the life and work of the Pan-Hellenic Council.

Reunion year in '53; we meet once more to see
What changes ten years' time has wrought on the Class of '43.

A famous lecturer all over the nation,
Foster was there to make the oration.
Praises for Winkler and Urquhart rang long
When opera stars consented to give us a song.
Frannie was silently enjoying it too,
With no meetings, no classes, no nothing to do.
Ruth came in late—it was one of those nights,
But only when prompted by our flicking the lights.
The sophisticate Johnson to add to our throng
Had traveled ten miles with nothing gone wrong.
Grace now a model for Shampoo "Ma Chere"
Came in with a toss of her long lustrous hair.

The two Ann's zest for initiation had left,
While Mary Weir's black hair of gray was bereft.
Off in a corner sat the Bruns all the while
With never a word, nor even a smile.
Trynie, the delight of the diplomacy corps
Was passing out free cigarettes at the door.
But the shock of the evening, oh sad to relate,
Came when Blanche wandered in minus a date.
Sis Bohannon was with us and I tell you no lie,
She was the Grand National President of A. D. Pi.
Mrs. Folwell was beaming, looking over her brood
As we perfected the system of passing the food.
Time had changed all with this exception alone,
Huldah, still at her books, was the best monotone.

IGHT LIFE

M

IDPOINT BETWEEN ATLANTA AND WASHINGTON,

Chapel Hill's neon-lighted pleasure way looks like a blackout in a photographer's darkroom in comparison, and at first looks like the last outpost of after-supper recreation to our more cosmopolitan students. Lacking an El Morocco in September, they learn to substitute a booth in Marley's by November. Lacking tall swigging drinks in a modernistic bar, they soon learn to enjoy a coke over a marble slab in the University Cafe or a beer at Jeff's.

"Doing the town" reduces to casual window shopping, "hey-ing" friends on the street, starting the evening with a strip of celluloid at E. Carrington's lavish and blood red emporium, then going for a bite of food at one of the local toasted sandwich dispensaries.

But all is not as dismal as it seems, for even in the simplicity of the entertainment, there is still a sense of the casual that marks the Chapel Hill day. Lengthy preparation for a date, long dresses and expensive drinks would be out of place in an undergraduate town that is proud of baggy trousers, skirts and sweaters and ease of living. One senses that a raucous Saturday night dance-parlor would be out of place in a town that nestles in the woods, and that sophisticates leaning on a bar would seem slightly incongruous.

Instead, a Music Room and a Small Lounge (with a juke box) in Graham Memorial takes care of dancing and musical enthusiasts, and the Pines, Danziger's, the University, Campus Cafe and Marathon takes care of midnight appetites.

For those more romantically inclined, there has always been the Carolina moon, and Kenan stadium is still the most popular star-gazing and dreaming spot—a quiet contrast to the active athletics on that sward during the day by the Pre-Flight Cadets. With increased pedestrian traffic this year, the popularity of the Arboretum waned and was replaced by the leaf shadowed walks of Chapel Hill.

As an accent to the year may be added the sight of the "after-dance shift"—or the tuxed and gardeniaed couples hopelessly wandering the streets of town seeking for an open place to eat in the wee hours—knowing that a labor shortage had put a damper on late eating. And, oh yes, there were the dances too . . .

GLAMOUR, GIRLS AND GAYETY

ON THE FOLLOWING PAGES you will find scenes reminiscent of pre-war Carolina. One might think that the war had not touched Carolina, but we know better. Our daytime activities are all, one way or another, tied up to the war effort. But when the week-end rolls around, we forget for a few short hours and enjoy ourselves in the old way. We get our glamour, girls, and gaiety in small doses these days but we glean the fullest pleasure from them when we do have them. Our fun is just a little reminder of the old Carolina way of life that we like to remember . . . put it under morale if you must have an excuse.

Dances for the Duration!

*F*ROM TIME IMMEMORIAL, dances at the University of North Carolina have had the reputation of being the best in the nation. This year, however, there have been no big name bands at the Hill. The combined Junior-Senior set offered Tommy Reynolds as the year's biggest attraction. Local orchestras such as Johnny Satterfield, The Duke Ambassadors and Shirley Smith furnished the music for German Club Dances that used to feature top notchers like Sammy Kaye, Jimmy Dorsey, Tony Pastor and Charley Spivack.

Absence of big name bands, however, did little to mar the "Carolina Week-Ends." Imports were still plentiful and lovely as ever, and coeds also came in for their share of dates for the big affairs.

To take the place of big name bands, dance committees attempted to furnish entertainment for the entire week-end with many parties, record sessions at Graham Memorial and band concerts whenever possible.

Just as many formal affairs as ever were held this year and concessions still showed a nice little profit for evening wraps and top coats.

Freshman-Sophomore dances paved the way by having the Saturday night dance informal. Inter-Dormitory dances, always informal, took over Easter week-end and anybody wearing a tux or tails was shooed away from the gym. So formals and informals combined to keep up the dance tradition at the Hill.

The Dance Committee faced a tough job this year because many students leaving school wanted to have a final fling and raise the "roof." The roof was never raised and dances throughout the year have been orderly and well attended.

For the first time Pre-Flight Cadets made their appearance on the Woollen Gymnasium dance floor and later in the season Pre-Meteorology students began to appear.

These service groups were usually admitted free, if accompanied by dates, and usually not admitted if not accompanied by dates. On the whole, relations between the cadets and the students in regards to dances were cordial ones and the Navy uniforms helped to lend a colorful note to many dances.

Biggest dance of the year was the President's Birthday Ball. Music was furnished by the Pre-Flight band of colored musicians, and the gym was literally packed with townspeople, students, cadets, soldiers, professors and officers.

Dance Committees this year rate a big hand for going through with progressive programs and keeping Carolina dances going in anticipation of the times when big name bands will once more appear at the Hill.

DANCE NIGHTS WERE HAPPY NIGHTS—FOR THE BOYS IN UNIFORM AS WELL AS THOSE IN TAILS.

The University Dance Committee

*F*ACED WITH THE PROBLEM of limited dance expenditures, and a necessary cut in the number of dances, the work of the University Dance Committee has been particularly effective this past year. Like all university governing bodies, the dance committee was hard hit by the war and saw many of its representatives leave school throughout the year.

Best work done by the organization was in acting as host and governing campus dances under unusual circumstances. Many boys having a "final fling" at these dances had to be watched closely and the committee did a good job of keeping dances orderly. Its work has done much to help keep Carolina dances up to their excellent standard of the past, and because of this group, it is likely that a rebirth of big name bands at the Hill will take place after the war.

German Club Executive Committee

THE GERMAN CLUB Executive Committee this past year was faced with two problems. The first was that of keeping the German Club going during wartime and how to keep it functioning efficiently. The second problem was that of presenting dances under wartime restrictions. A minor harassment was that of keeping the Executive Committee together, as many of its members were called in by Uncle Sam.

An important addition to the ranks of German Club

Members was made when the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity joined as a body in the month of November.

OUTNUMBERED!

FALL GERMANS

*M*ORE THAN 700 COUPLES filled Woollen Gymnasium to dance to the music of Ted Ross and his orchestra Saturday night, November 20, after the Carolina blue and white eleven had started off the day's entertainment by holding a powerful Duke team to a 13-13 deadlock.

The Friday night dance was open to the campus with bids being sold at the door, while the Saturday night dance was reserved for German Club members only. "Reserved for German Club members only," however, is a slogan which is hard to uphold and the gym was packed.

The Duke-Carolina week-end is always one of the biggest events of the fall social season. In addition to the biggest and hardest fought football game of the year, the German dances have always been held on that week-end and add to the festivities.

Two "ifs" marred Saturday. If Clay Croom could have gotten away for ten more yards to have scored or if Billy Myers could have scored with that other extra point we would have beaten the Devils. But, although we did not win, we did not lose and the week-end was almost perfect.

The sponsors of the dances, who composed the Sophomore representatives' figure, were led by Miss Aileen Timeline, Arlington, N. J., with Frank Warren, Zeta Psi.

Other sponsors were: Miss Jane Thuston, Birmingham, Ala., with Ben Gold, Sigma Nu; Miss Mary Bradley, Maryland, with Percy Warner Mallison, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Miss Evelyn Adams, Maplewood, N. J., with Harold V. Garrity, Sigma Chi; Miss Peggy Nimocks, Fayetteville, with Wildon Jordon, Alpha Tau Omega; Miss Pat White, Mystic, Conn., with Louis Nicoud, Delta Psi; Miss Sis Hingle, Lexington, with Fred Green, Kappa Sigma; Miss Pattie Campbell, Mobile, Ala., with Frank Frazier, Delta Kappa Epsilon; and Miss Nancy King, Bristol, Tenn., with David Massengill, Kappa Alpha.

*J*HE ANNUAL MID-WINTERS dance set was held on February 26 and 27 with Johnny Satterfield's orchestra fronted by Bud Montgomery furnishing the jive on both occasions.

The set this year presented a picturesque contrast to the same set held in 1942, when Charley Spivak brought his band, featuring the Stardusters, to the Hill for a triumphant stay.

In keeping with the wartime budget this year, Satterfield's band was chosen for the music, and decorations and other expenses were kept to a minimum.

The Friday night dance presented a problem because it was in direct competition with a Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps dance, at which the Pre-Flight band was furnishing the music. The dance floor was less crowded than usual, which meant only that more people were introduced and that helped to break the ice for the week-end.

On Saturday night, the gym was filled, and with no competition, the last night of the dance was a complete success for the first wartime Mid-Winters.

This dance is sponsored by Past years have seen "big-name" bands here for May Frolics such as Jimmy Dorsey. This year, as last year, the University limitation of dance expenditures caused the elimination of famous bands but did not in the least eliminate any of the spirit of the occasion.

The seven fraternities are: Beta Theta Pi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu and Zeta Psi.

This year's officers are: William Sigler, President, Kappa Sigma; Emmet McKenzie, Vice-President, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; William Vail, Secretary-Treasurer, Sigma Chi; and Charles Clark, Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Sigma Nu.

Those appearing in the figure Friday night, April 30, were: Miss Ann Geoghegan with Sidney White, Leader, Zeta Psi; Miss Ann Fountain with Thomas Dill, Delta Kappa Epsilon; Miss Margaret Glenn with Cliff Frazier, Beta Theta Pi; Miss Nancy Baumgartner with William Sigler, Kappa Sigma; Miss Barbara Peele with William Vail, Sigma Chi; Miss Sarah Sutton with Charles Clark, Sigma Nu.

The Saturday afternoon concert was sponsored by The Order of the Grail, and was marked by some of "the darndest weather" the Hill had ever seen. Snow, rain and sunshine teamed their talents throughout the day to keep a few people away from the concert, but what the crowd lacked in numbers, they made up in enthusiasm.

Saturday night was the grand finale and saw the gym full of coeds and imports, shining alike. The curtain came down at midnight and found everyone tired, chilly, and happy.

CAROLINA STUDENTS who attend the dance sets are made up of three types: The person who invites one girl to come down and she comes; the guy who invites a dozen and finally goes stag; and the fellow who asks two girls down believing that maybe one of them will be able to come and they both arrive.

Imports usually get in town on Friday afternoon. But the story begins before then. Announcement of the dance date sends many students hurrying to paper and pencil or to a nearby pay phone.

SOME LIKE IT SWEET . . .

WHILE OTHERS LIKE IT HOT.

MONTGOMERY PACKS 'EM IN.

A DANCE

"Oh, Gee, darling, it looks like you wouldn't have planned to go to Cornell this week-end. You know I had been planning on asking you when the date was set. Can't you possibly break that date? I'm on the dance committee and you would be a sponsor and have your picture in the paper. Yes, in all the state papers. Yes, in your home town paper too. What? You say you can come. That's swell, honey. You're real sweet to break that date just for me. See you Friday."

But all the fellows are not on the dance committee. Many girls have dates, or their folks won't let them come, or they are expecting to go to grandmother's funeral. However, the majority of ones asked "would love to come" and begin preparing for a big week-end.

The boy, meanwhile, begins looking for a place for the "chicken" to stay and by some miracle always finds a respectable private home where the lady of the house is willing to take week-end guests.

WHAT GOES ON?

THE MADDING CROWD.

WEEK - E N D

Then begins the search for missing cuff links and studs, and the best tie which some friend borrowed last week-end. The pocketbook is always remarkably empty about time for some big dance to come up, but a friend comes through most of the time. God bless him.

So the import arrives and you take her out to dinner; then to the dance that night and then—well, you name it, we're bashful.

Saturday morning, if you have a strong constitution, you get up for breakfast and show her around the campus. After lunch, a talk, the movies, or the band concert is the next stop. Dance that night, a midnight snack somewhere and back to bed.

Eleven o'clock Sunday morning comes mighty soon, but it is always nice to show off your girl at church so somehow or other you manage to get up and go. Sunday afternoon you both lounge around with bags under your eyes until the bus arrives. And so another Carolina week-end is written into the books, leaving you tired and happy.

If your girl is a coed, the only difference is that she has seen the campus and has to go in earlier at night, but after the dance—you still name it—and are tired and happy.

THE CHI OMEGA PLEDGE DANCE.

THE DANCE IS OVER—BUT IT'S ONLY THE BEGINNING OF THE EVENING!

SOCIAL ORGANIZATION

A LITTLE OBSCURE to most students, but close to the lives of their student members are Carolina's Social Organizations. These organizations are not interested in crusading, nor in solving matters of profound import—but they can point to a definite if intangible value in the friendships they foster and the good will they seek to spread. They are a unique part of Carolina's "lighter side of life."

Most mysterious of these is the campus' older Junior Society, the Order of Gimghoul, with its hooded knights, its spectacular castle, and its aura of secrecy. Familiar among its possessions is Battle seat, favorite sunrise spot on dance week-ends. A little younger, but equally important, is the Order of Gorgan's Head, whose members gather and fraternize at their Franklin Street "lodge." These closely-knit groups can claim among their membership some of the University's most respected alumni.

More evident are the Sophomore Orders—the Sheiks, the Thirteen Club, and the Minotaurs, who entertain the campus annually with the weird attire and mid-morning antics of their initiates. Though more loosely bound together than the Junior Societies, these organizations have get-togethers throughout the year on festive occasions. Each has a membership of about forty students.

Together the Sophomore and Junior Societies represent a definite part of University life away from the athletic field and outside of the classroom. The informality they symbolize is a valuable part of a college career.

ATHLETICS

WORDS CAN'T EXPRESS A SPIRIT. You've got to feel it. Neither can you write about tradition and make someone else conscious of it. Those who were present at Carolina during the first full year of the war, though, will forever remember that those who represented them in sports carried on with the same spirit and same tradition that has been typical of Carolina athletes down through the years.

You felt it in Kenan Stadium while watching a football game, knew it was still in the gym during a basketball, boxing or wrestling match, became conscious of it in the pool, on the tennis court, intramural field, or baseball diamond. Furthermore, you knew it was scattered through the four corners of the earth; for Carolina men, athletes of former years, were fighting everywhere.

One morning during the year you picked up your newspaper and read that George D. Watson, co-captain of the Carolina football team of 1938, had been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism during the Guadalcanal campaign. On another occasion you read about Captain Ramsay D. Potts, Jr., one of Carolina's greatest basketball and tennis players, having been decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross for his work as a squadron leader of heavy bombers "in a raid that happened to be particularly successful" somewhere in the Middle East. There were others, many of them. These are mentioned for they are typical of Carolina athletes of former years, and they're typical of the men who represented Carolina in various sports this year.

The football team enjoyed a most successful season. . . . The basketball team, minus the service of many stars called into the service, failed to make the conference tournament. . . . Still it was a team that gave its best at all times. . . . Boxing under a new coach did wonders. . . . So did swimming, wrestling, tennis, baseball. . . . Our Tar Heels did us proud. . . . Moreover, the presence of the U. S. Navy Pre-Flight School made us, as individuals, more conscious of our own physical fitness. . . . Sports at Carolina, everywhere, continued to live. . . . They entertained those already fighting, and they prepared many others to go.

THEY WEAR THE BLUE AND WHITE

*J*UST AS BRAVE, DARING AND TOUGH as their predecessors were the men who wore the colors of Blue and White this year. Their attitude was different, naturally. You're bound to look at things a little differently when the world is at war.

If anything, the boys took their athletics a little more seriously. They realized that their performances on the field of friendly battle would prepare themselves for another battle they were going to fight. It meant more than defeating Duke or going through the season undefeated. It meant helping the Allies win the victory and then the peace.

The coaches had their troubles. There was always a star athlete leaving school to enter the service. Still there were no crying towels. The coaches wanted their boys to serve. Moreover, many of them left the University to speed up the victory.

The Season in Review

*I*T WAS A NEW CAROLINA SPIRIT, a new coaching staff, and an almost completely new team that saw the Tar Heels through their first wartime football season. Moreover, it was a coaching staff and football team that worked overtime to do credit to the University students and alumni it represented. In return, it received the wholehearted support of those students and alumni.

Naturally, the war slowed things down a bit. You don't let yourself completely go when you know your classmates and friends are scattered in the four corners of the earth fighting to preserve democracy—even that phase of it which made it possible for you to spend your Saturdays in Kenan Stadium.

The season started out slow. Not too much was expected of the gridders, for there were no newcomers of established reputations, and the previous season had been anything but successful. What proved to be the biggest surprise was the way some of the Sophomores came through. First, there was Chan Highsmith, as fine a center as the Southern Conference has seen in years. Then there was Billy (The Kid) Myers, as fine a running back as the Tar Heels had all year. And, among others, Ralph Strayhorn, Andy Karres, and Meredith Jones in the line.

Wake Forest, who had defeated the Tar Heels the two previous years, was the opening opponent . . . Carolina won, 6 to 0 . . . Followed South Carolina's Gamecocks and another victory, 18 to 6 . . . To New York the following Saturday and the Tar Heels battled the lads from Rose Hill to a 0 to 0 tie . . . Then the biggest surprise of the season . . . The final game with the University of Virginia at Charlottesville . . . The Tar Heels encountered little trouble as they won, 28 to 13.

Thus ended the season. Co-Captains Joe Austin and Tank Marshall led the way, and a Carolina team once again did itself proud in Big Five and Southern Conference football.

AUSTIN TAKES A SPILL IN THE RAIN.

*B*ROADCASTERS couldn't mention it on the day it happened, but it rained in Chapel Hill for that first game. Not a gentle unmentionable rain—but a gully washer and trash mover.

But at game's end an exultant Carolina student body basked in the rays of sunshine that the weather man didn't record. It was for them the end of a perfect day. Carolina was on the march again.

During the first three periods things were fairly even. Neither team really produced a scoring threat. Then Dame Fortune smiled on Carolina. Red Cochran, spearhead of the Wake attack, broke loose for a 28-yard punt return in the third period, was hit savagely by Clay Croom, Tar Heel fullback, and fumbled the ball. Sophomore Ralph Strayhorn recovered, and Bill Sigler ripped off 12 yards in three tries for a first down on the Baptist 16 as the third quarter ended. A penalty put the ball on the Carolina 11, and Hugh "Shot" Cox in two tries scored the first UNC touchdown over Wake Forest in three years.

Up and Coming Tar Heels Defeat Gamecocks, 18 to 6

don't forget the way those sophomores played

THOSE FANS WHO FELT the Tar Heels were lucky to defeat Wake Forest had their thoughts changed the following Saturday when an underdog Tar Heel team came through with victory number two, an 18 to 6 triumph over South Carolina's Gamecocks.

Sparked by Clay Croom and Sophomore Billy Myers the Tar Heels capitalized on a Gamecock fumble on the 29-yard line to score in the first period. Croom did the scoring, a swan dive from the two.

A 50-yard run by Myers placed the ball on South Carolina's 2-yard line, and Bill Sigler, after three tries, scored the second Carolina tally midway in the second period. A 45-yard drive, with O'Hare of the visitors scoring, made it 12-6 at half-time.

The last score came at the start of the second period. Croom started it with a 42-yard run that carried to the South Carolina 19. Four plays later Croom scored.

While the victory was welcomed, Carolina students started talking about the sophomores, Chan Highsmith in particular. Playing against Leo Sossamon, all-southern center, Highsmith played a whale of a game which gave indications of things to come.

Tar Heels Scrap, But Fordham Contest Ends in Tie

Chan Highsmith gave New Yorkers something to talk about

KARRES

FORDHAM WAS THE HEAVY PRE-GAME favorite, the contest ended in a scoreless tie, and for some reason the outcome disappointed Tar Heel supporters.

True, the oldtimers were pleased, but Carolina students had begun to take to these Tar Heels and their new spirit. They had become over-enthusiastic. They expected too much.

It was a case of the New Yorkers threatening all afternoon while the Tar Heel offense wasn't the potent weapon it had been before. However, the line's brilliant goal line stand in the fourth quarter, and the vicious tackling that thrice caused Fordham to fumble were all that Carolina followers could ask for.

For Carolina the outstanding players on offense were Billy Myers, Joe Austin, Walt Papa and Bill Sigler. In the line, the outstanding men were Ralph Strayhorn, Craven Turner, Chan Highsmith, Meredith Jones, Tank Marshall and Joe Wolf. Highsmith, playing his third varsity game, gave his third brilliant exhibition.

RICE WAS SUPPOSED to be Carolina's next opponent but wartime transportation caused it to be cancelled. Duquesne, one of the finest teams in the nation and unbeaten in 16 games, was booked just five days before the contest was played.

At the game's end, the Iron Dukes probably wished they had not been so accommodating, but at half-time, it appeared that Carolina was destined to be victim No. 17 in the victory string. The home team was trailing by a touchdown as a result of the backfield wizardry of Duquesne's magicians.

Max Kielbasa raced around end for 40 yards with three minutes remaining in the first period, and the visitors led, 6 to 0. The second half was a different story for Carolina with Co-Captain Joe Austin crossing the goal line twice for Carolina within 10 minutes. The first Carolina score came as a result of a 10-yard pass from Billy Myers, and the second was a 71-yard run on a beautiful reverse.

Late in the game Duquesne started a comeback but Bill Sigler kicked a 77-yard punt, the ball rolling dead on the Iron Dukes two-yard line, and it was Carolina's victory.

Tulane Air Power Proves Disastrous

remember how quiet things got on the campus after the game

DEFEAT WITHOUT DISHONOR came to Carolina the following Saturday at New Orleans when Tulane handed the Tar Heels their first loss, 29-14, before a crowd of 20,000.

Carolina was in the ball game until the third period, when the Greenies scored ten points on a touchdown, extra point, and a field goal. During the second period they were ahead of the Wave, 7 to 6, for four minutes. Tulane scored first on an 80-yard drive. Then a pass — Cox to John Tandy — produced a Carolina touchdown after which Myers kicked the extra point to give the Tar Heels a short lived lead.

Fischer's pass to McDonald for 46 yards gave the Green Wave a 12-7 half-time lead. Behind 22 to 7 in the fourth period, the Tar Heels roared back to move 75 yards through the heavy Tulane line for a hard earned touchdown. Chan Highsmith intercepted a pass to start it, Croom did the scoring on a 9-yard plunge. Carolina then started passing and an interception gave the Tulane team another touchdown and victory.

Spirited State Won the Next Saturday, 21 to 14 for us, it was the saddest saturday of the football season

A TEAM THAT WAS EXPECTED to give the Tar Heels little trouble scored one of the season's biggest upsets at Raleigh. The team in question was N. C. State, and the result was a 21-14 Wolfpack victory over the Tar Heels.

From the start it was State's game. They scored first in the second period on a trick play that was much the same that won last year's game for them. Then they followed it up with a fine passing game to make a second touchdown. At this point the Tar Heels roused themselves sufficiently to send Co-Captain Joe Austin over the goal line in the last minute of the first half to trail by 14-7 at intermission.

Two fumbles in the last half put Carolina behind again. Substitute Moser scored State's final score on a plunge from the one-yard line. A 46-yard drive produced the final Carolina score as Billy Myers, who scored it, did most of the passing and running.

CAROLINA HAPPILY snapped its two-game losing streak and at the same time ran up its largest score of the season defeating Davidson, 43 to 14.

AUSTIN SCORES THE FIRST TOUCHDOWN.

MYERS AWAY FOR THIRTY-EIGHT YARDS.

The 43 points also set a new mark for scoring in the Carolina-Davidson series, the Tar Heel's previous high coming in 1915 when they won by 41-7.

Coach Jim Tatum's first team ran up a 20 to 0 lead at half-time, and were content to let the reserves play a large part of the second half when the scrappy Wildcats pushed over their two tallies with a clever aerial attack.

"Shot" Cox's 61-yard punt return on the opening kick-off was a clear indication of things to come. Joe Austin scored touchdown number one, Myers number two, Cox number three, Myers number four, Sam Abres five, and Rivers Johnson six, the latter's score coming on a 53-yard pass from Pecora. Sigler kicked two of the extra points and Cooke, Pupa and Lee one each. The other two points came when Ehly recovered George Peters' fumble behind the Davidson goal.

Came the Big Game And a 13-13 Tie

we'll always wonder why we didn't score in the fourth period

IT STARTED OUT LIKE the Blue Devils would win in a walk, but when it was over the visitors were happy with a 13 to 13 tie. The Tar Heels all but scored a winning touchdown in the final minutes of play.

Duke scored first in the opening period when Mike Cooke's punt was blocked, and Burns scooped it up on the 15 and ran the remainder of the distance to score.

Johnny Pecora's 31-yard pass to Joe Austin put the ball on the Blue Devil's 10-yard stripe, and set up the first Tar Heel score. John Tandy made the touchdown on a perfectly executed double reverse, one of the most beautiful plays seen in Kenan Stadium in years.

Duke took the lead again on the sixth play of the last quarter when Davis plunged over from the one-foot line. Luper had started it with a 21-yard end run.

Bang! Things changed. Eighty yards the Tar Heels travelled, the first item being a 38-yard pass from Myers to Austin. Two more passes—Myers-to-Hussey—and a five-yard gain by Austin placed the ball on Duke's nine. Two plays lost four yards, and it happened again—Myers-to-Hussey—this time for a touchdown. Myers' kick was wide, and the score was tied.

IT TOOK SIX TO STOP DUKE'S DAVIS!

Clay Croom set up another score that failed to materialize when he intercepted one of Davis' heaves on the 37, and raced to the Duke 11. The same combination—Myers-to-Hussey—failed to connect and Davis intercepted the pass on his own eight-yard line. This ended the scoring threats for both teams, and left the 33,000 spectators with one of the finest played Duke-Carolina games in years.

TANDY TIPS UP THE SCORE.

We Won at Virginia To Even Long Series

hail to the tar heels; their season's play has made us proud

*T*HE FINAL GAME AT VIRGINIA brought to a close a much more successful season than Tar Heel supporters had anticipated. The score was 28 to 13 in favor of the Tar Heels, and the result made the season record stand at five wins, two losses, and two ties.

Cox

THAT MAN COX AGAIN!

Bill Sigler, who surprised everyone all season with his brilliant play, carried off tackle for 61 yards in the first minute of play, and butted over in two tries from the four-yard line to make the first score. Heymann scored touchdown number two when he recovered a fumble by Kriek in the second quarter, and Pecora's 12-yard end run got the third six pointer. Myers' 14-yard end run in the final period produced the final marker. Cooke kicked three of the extra points, Hussey one.

Stars for Carolina were plentiful. Bill Sigler led the backs, followed by Joe Austin, Walt Pupa and Hugh Cox. Craven Turner and Jack Hussey were again good at the ends, and Andy Karres, Chan Highsmith and Bob Heymann did well in the middle of the line.

CAROLINA COACHES, realizing the need for leaders in their respective fields of the armed forces, were quick to answer the call for service. Shortly after Pearl Harbor they started enlisting, and as the war gained in momentum they prepared to help win the fight.

COACH LANGE

SOMEHOW CAROLINA's basketball team never got started this year, and for the first time in the history of the Southern Conference Tournament, the White Phantoms failed to get a bid. However, it can be honestly said that at times the White Phantoms showed flashes of brilliance, and had it not been for a slump during the last two weeks the record might have been much better.

Loss of men to various branches of the armed forces hurt most. First it was Captain-elect George Paine who left to join the paratroopers at Christmas. Then before the final game three more veterans were called into the army. All this Coach Bill Lange had to contend with in addition to the problem of molding a team from untried material. It is significant to note that for the first time since World War I freshmen earned starting berths.

L. HAYWORTH

Replacing Paine as Captain was George "Toad" McCachren of Charlotte who became the fourth brother in his family to captain the White Phantoms during the past ten years.

Wins were recorded during the season in eight Conference games; losses in nine. George Washington, tournament winner over Duke, was held to a close 34-33 game in January following which the Tar Heels won three games in a row. In the Clemson game at Chapel Hill, February 2, Carolina won handily 52-33, with Freshman Fritz Nagy scoring nine points and Dick Hartley 11. But the same week Duke took some of the sweetness out of those victories in a game played in Woollen Gymnasium. At half-time the score was 22-16, but Gantt, Seward and Raleigh in January and Davidson had defeated the Tar Heels in Charlotte. Against State Hartley ran wild to score 17 points and the local quint was never behind.

Against Davidson with its stellar Tommy Peters, later named the most valuable player in the Southern Conference Tournament, the Tar Heels doubled the score, 50 to 25. Peters got 14, but Hartley had 15 and Nagy 12. At half-time Carolina led 15-14, but the second half turned into a walkaway.

HAYWORTH UNDER GANTT FOR A TOUCHDOWN.

Carver paced the Devils as they went on to win, 51 to 39. The three Duke stars together tallied 35 points; Hartley again led the Tar Heels with 12. Ellis Freeman stood out at guard for Carolina in the first half and thanks to his close guarding, the Tar Heels were very much in the ball game.

Perhaps the season's high spots came February 9 and 12 against State and Davidson in Chapel Hill. State previously had beaten Carolina, 47-36, in

NAGY AND RODMAN TAP ONE IN AGAINST CLEMSON.

At this stage the Tar Heels appeared "in" as far as the tournament was concerned, but disastrous games with Maryland and Richmond followed. In a wild, furious contest played at Chapel Hill Maryland won, 40-31, by staging a rally in the last five minutes. With nine minutes of playing time Hartley fouled out with the score 25-25. In Richmond two nights later, the Spiders continued their jinx on Carolina teams—winning 53-51. Nagy and Hartley led the scoring with 34 points between them, and the Tar Heels were ahead at the half, 31-22.

Back at Chapel Hill the Tar Heels returned to mid-season form, defeating South Carolina, 50-27, to keep in the tournament running. Jim White, playing his last game before going into the Air Corps, scored 17 points alone. Then came the final Duke game—in Durham. Minus White, Edgar Lougee and Jim Hayworth, the Tar Teels nevertheless went into the game to win. At half-time Duke led, 17-14, but in the second half Duke pressure laid the Tar Heels low and ceremoniously kicked them out of tournament consideration.

BASEBALL

FOR THE SECOND consecutive year Carolina's baseball team won the Big Five and Southern Conference crowns, and it was more spirit than ability that brought the titles to Chapel Hill.

Marking up a 4 to 2 victory over Camp Lee, Va. to open the season, the team went on to score fifteen wins against three losses.

Red Benton limited Maryland to five hits in the opening Southern Conference game for the Tar Heels, and the locals won, 6 to 0. The next afternoon Monk Whiteheart, sophomore right-hander, turned in a like performance over the same club, winning 7 to 0.

Followed a 6 to 3 victory over V.P.I. with Charlie Moore on the mound for the Tar Heels, and a 4 to 2 victory over Davidson when Lou Hayworth singled home the two winning runs in the ninth inning. South Carolina was the next victim—the score being 12 to 1, the winning chunker being Moore who gave up four hits.

BASEBALL

Lou Hayworth's two-run homer in the fourth coupled with Red Benton's six-hit pitching gave the Tar Heels a 4 to 1 victory over Wake Forest in their first encounter. Two days later against N. C. State Benton won his second game in three days. Tied 2-2 at the end of the ninth, State scored two runs in the first of the tenth only to see the Tar Heels come back and score three tallies and a victory.

The bats of Co-Captain Bo Reynolds, Bobby Gersten and Co-Captain Chubby Myers did the most damage as Virginia was defeated, 18 to 1, in the next start.

A trip to Maryland and Navy saw the Tar Heels drop both contests. At College Park Maryland won, 8 to 7, in a 10 inning game, and Middies defeated Carolina, 6 to 2, at Annapolis.

Back to Chapel Hill and a 4 to 1 win over Davidson followed by the only Big Five defeat of the year, a 4 to 2 loss to Wake Forest. Virginia was next, losing to the Tar Heels, 5 to 2, and Wake Forest dropped a 6 to 5 game to Carolina in their final encounter. State was next, losing by 4 to 3, and Duke closed the season, dropping two games to the Tar Heels, 5 to 4, and 3 to 2. The 5 to 4 contest played at Greensboro was typical of the way the Tar Heels came from behind all season. In that particular game they scored four runs in the ninth to win.

As champions of both the Big Five and Southern Conference Carolina had a state record of eight wins against only one set back, and a conference record of 12 wins against two losses.

Statistics reveal that Lew Hayworth, sophomore third baseman, led the hitting with a healthy .361 average. Lew hit safely 22 times in 61 official appearances. Only three other players topped the time-honored .300 class. Co-Captains Chubby Myers and Bo Reynolds hit .340 and .318 respectively, while Bobby Gersten hit .304.

The veteran Benton was the mainstay of the pitching corps as he worked all or part of 13 of 17 games. He won seven games, lost one and pitched 91 innings. Charlie Moore won six to wind up the season undefeated.

COACH HEARN

REYNOLDS STRIKES AGAINST STATE.

As spring 1943 hit the campus the baseball outlook is none too bright. Lew Hayworth was elected team captain at the start of the season. Gone are pitchers Red Benton and Monk Whiteheart. Bob Shuford, Al Carmichael and Charlie Moore appear to be the only capable chunkers on hand. Dub Johnson is back at first base, Mac Morris at second, and Captain Hayworth has been shifted from third to short. In the hot corner is footballer Johnny Pecora. Outfielders include Black, Craven Turner, Jack Hussey, and Mike Cooke, and Lee and Walters are fighting it out for Myers' backstop position. If the draft doesn't take any players indications point to a fast, hustling club that will be strong afield, but which will lack hitting and pitching power.

TENNIS

*A*LTHOUGH ITS REMARKABLE four-year winning streak of 66 consecutive triumphs was snapped by a determined Princeton team by a scant 5-4 margin, the varsity tennis team again received national recognition for its record of 1-4 victories against only one defeat for a winning percentage of .933. Highlights of the year were victories over Yale, Duke, Cornell, Virginia and Maryland, traditional rivals.

MARKHAM

For the third consecutive year Carolina made a clean sweep of the Southern Conference singles and doubles championship in an all University finals.

Co-Captain Harris Everett, No. 1 ranking player, defeated Co-Captain Ham Anthony, teammate and No. 2 man, by scores of 6-1, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 to win the singles title and then teamed with Anthony to defeat Harold Maass and Hunt Hobbs, also of Carolina, 6-4, 8-6, 6-3 to clinch the doubles title. It marked the second time that Everett had won the singles championship and also the second occasion Everett and Anthony were victorious in the doubles finals.

Opening the season against Cornell, the netmen defeated the invaders from the North twice, dropping only one match each time. A team from Kalamazoo, Michigan, was next, and the Tar Heels made it victory number three, by the same score, 8 to 1. St. Johns of Brooklyn was next, losing 7 to 2.

N. C. State, Elon, Virginia, Catawba, N. C. State, Duke, Davidson and Maryland followed in that order, and all proved easy prey for the Tar Heel netters. Elon, Catawba and Duke each won a single match, and the rest were whitewashed.

Following the regular northern trip, and the team opened with a close 5 to 4 victory over the Yale Bulldogs. At Princeton came the first defeat in four years as the Tigers won, 5 to 4. The hard-fought match was not decided until the final point of the last doubles match when Princeton's Bender and Edwards trounced the No. 3 Tar Heel pair of Hunt Hobbs and Harold Maass, 6-4, 6-3. The season ended against George Washington, the Tar Heels winning, 9 to 0.

TRACK

*I*N ONE OF THE most exciting finishes in the Southern Conference's 20-year-old history, Carolina's 1942 varsity track team came from behind in the late events to dethrone Duke's defending champions and bring to the University its fourth Conference outdoor crown in the space of only five years.

Carolina racked up 64 points while its arch rival came in a close second with 61½ points.

Individual star of the big meet was Carolina's Warren Mengel with 14 points. Mengel won the low hurdles and broad jump and was second by less than a foot in the high hurdles.

Victory came to Carolina on the strength of the Tar Heel's well balanced squad. Actually Carolina won but four of the 15 events, but their ability to take the second, third, fourth and fifth places paid dividends in the long run.

Only three dual meets were held by the Tar Heels in 1942. Opening against Duke the locals won, 66 to 60, as Warren Mengel scored 16 points. He won the deciding event, the low hurdles, also took first in the 120-high hurdles and placed second in the broad jump and high jump.

With Roy Cathey and Dick Van Wagoner sharing the limelight Virginia fell by the wayside next, 76½ to 49½. Cathey won first in the 220- and 40-yard races, and Van Wagoner won the mile and tied for first in the 880. Men-

INDOOR TRACK

REPLACING THE Southern Conference Indoor Track Championships was the Southern Invitation Indoor Games, sponsored jointly by the U. S. Navy Pre-Flight School and the University of North Carolina, and held in Chapel Hill on February 27.

Some 200 individuals representing 16 institutions and military outfits, participated, ranging from Alabama to Annapolis.

Throughout the meet Carolina and Navy of Annapolis were neck and neck and with but one event remaining there was but six-tenths of a point between them. The final event was the mile relay. Running for the Tar Heels were Larry Holzman, Richard Van Wagoner, Roy Cathey and Mike Mangum. Holzman gained the initial lead and maintained it for three legs, however, on the last lap Navy's anchor man pulled up alongside Mangum to challenge the Tar Heel's lead. Mangum kicked out with a burst of speed on the last turn and won with yards to spare; Carolina winning the meet, 40.2 to 37.6. Virginia was third with 27, followed by V. P. I. with 12.6, Duke 9.5, V. M. I. 4.6, Pre-Flight School, 4.5, and four others trailing.

Two unofficial world's records were set. Tommy Todd, Virginia's great hurdler, twice ran the 70-yard low hurdles in 7.6. Paul McMullin of V. P. I. unofficially tied the world's record in the 60-yard dash with a time of 6.1.

In the Weil Mile Jack Creamer, of the Annapolis Navy, nosed out Carolina's Freshman Julian McKenzie in 4:27.7. Both finished ahead of Alabama's Southeastern champion, Bob Stevens.

Dale Ransom was Coach of the Carolina team while Coach Bob Fetzter, Carolina's athletic director, did most of the work of handling the details of the meet.

SWIMMING

*F*OR THE FOURTH consecutive year Coach Dick Jamerson's Blue Dolphins won the Southern Conference swimming championship. What's more the swimmers ran their number of consecutive home wins to 17, and their number of conference victories to 24.

Proof that they were best in the South and among the finest in the nation came in the final dual meet of the season when they defeated Georgia Tech's undefeated Southeastern Conference champions, 44 to 31, in the Bowman Gray pool. Their season record in dual meets was seven wins against a single loss; it being to Navy at Annapolis, 49 to 26.

After defeating V. M. I. 56 to 19, in the opening meet of the season, the Blue Dolphins downed V. P. I. 52 to 22, N. C. State 54½ to 19½, Duke 56 to 19, and won the A. A. U. Meet over Duke, 60 to 32. COACH CHUCK QUINLAN'S grapplers, defending Southern Conference Champions, were forced to relinquish their crown this year to V. M. I.—losing to the Cadets, 33-32 in the championship meet. However, the dual meet record of four wins against a single loss gave the Tar Heels one of their best seasons.

Starting off against Duke the Blue and White all but whitewashed the Methodists, winning 23-3. The only loss of the season—a 9-15 setback at the hands of V. M. I.—was sustained at Blacksburg in the second meet of the campaign. Three convincing triumphs—over N. C. State, 20-6, Washington and Lee, 17-9, and V. P. I., 25-3—were racked up in quick order. A sixth meet against Davidson was cancelled because of transportation difficulties.

The loss of undefeated 145-pounder Burgess Urquhart and Art Bleuthenthal, regular 155-pounder, to the Army Air Corps a week before the Conference meet undoubtedly hurt the Tar Heels' chances of repeating their victory of 1942.

Co-Captains Hobart McKeever, 128-pounder, and Frank Mordecai, 165-pounder, went through the regular season undefeated and went on to win conference championships in their respective weight divisions.

CROSS COUNTRY

LIKE MOST CAROLINA SPORTS, Cross Country was hard hit by the war. Only one meet was held during the entire season, but the squad was as large as usual, due to the fact that Coach Dale Ranson requires track team members to take cross country workouts in the fall as a conditioner for the spring sport.

The lone meet saw a fighting Navy club down the Tar Heel trackers by a 17 to -15 margin. Kramer of Navy placed first, followed by Carolina's Hall Patrick. Sim Nathan came in fourth and the rest of the Carolina men finished way down the list. Captain Rich Van Wagoner, who had been counted upon to win handily, was bothered by a cold, and was barely able to finish the race.

The annual Southern Conference meet, scheduled to take place at V. M. I., was called off because most schools in the Conference abandoned the sport for the duration. Duke, as well as other schools in the state, discontinued cross country.

A great deal of credit goes to several runners who did more than their share in helping the team. Among these were George Lewis, Frank Hardy, Sim Nathan and Hall Patrick.

Captain Lawrence (Shooky) Neese was the team's most consistent performer although Sophomore Dick Doeschler had the best individual low score of the season, a four under par 68 on the Hillandale course in Durham. Others who made a fine showing include Graydon Liles, Dave Rumph, Billy Peete and George Case.

There was no golf scheduled for this spring due to the war. Chuck Erickson, head coach, left school last summer and was commissioned a Lieutenant (j.g.) in the Navy.

GOLF

DESPITE THE FACT CAROLINA had its strongest golf team in years Coach Chuck Erickson's boys were unable to break Duke's strangle hold on the Conference championship.

The Tar Heels gave Duke a real scare in their first meeting, losing 16 to 11, but in the return contest the accurate Blue Devil shot-makers easily won 21 to 6.

In the annual Conference tournament held at Winston-Salem Duke successfully defended its title for the fifth straight year with a low team score of 601. Carolina was second with 620.

Victories came at the expense of Pennsylvania, 19 to 8, Georgetown, 17½ to 9½, The Citadel, 12½ to 5½, Virginia, 17 to 10, and Davidson, 12 to 6. The only other loss, besides the Duke setbacks, was at the hands of V. M. I., 11 to 7.

CHEERLEADERS

THE FALL of '42 brought forth ten of the yellin'-est Cheerleaders to grace our sidelines in many a moon. Four lovely coeds and six acrobatic males yipped their lungs out to inspire us to inspire the team. With an abundant supply of wind, cartwheels, a thousand cadets and one in particular, Cadet O'Sullivan, the New York cop, they had little trouble getting the Carolina twelfth man on his feet.

Traveling being curtailed due to the war, they were able to make only one long trip this year, but that trip will not be soon forgotten by the Fordham rooters. Riding through the streets of New York in an open cab, they startled even the most sophisticated metropolitans with yells and songs issuing from cotton-draped megaphones. Only four made the trip but they made enough noise for twenty.

Pep rallies were bigger and louder this year than any we could recall. Ten cheerleaders elicited yells and cheers that 'bid fair to tear the top off of staid old Memorial Hall.

Most of the boys are in the army now and one of the girls is married but we will not soon forget . . . LOUDER.

MONOGRAM CLUB

*T*HE MONOGRAM CLUB continued its work throughout the year, harmonizing the various athletics and encouraging fellowship among athletes of the varied sports. The organization lent its aid to the Athletic Association in securing student help for working football games and helping in other big events of the year.

On Homecoming Day open house was held in their clubroom for reunion of old members. During the year the clubroom was also used by campus organizations for social functions.

Officers for the year were: Mike Mangum, President; Tank Marshal, Vice-President; John Robinson, Secretary; Frank Hardy, Treasurer, and Denny Hammond, Representative to the Athletic Council.

Plans have been formulated for putting the club on a more stable basis by drafting a constitution to operate with the Club Code in guiding the policy of its members. The executive committee passes on men whom the coaches recommend for letter awards in their respective sports. Men accepted by this committee are finally approved by the athletic council.

In the past, an annual banquet has been held with outside speakers as guests, but this year this affair like other functions of the club has been cut out due to wartime conditions. Opportunities to obtain finances have been limited, disunity has occurred since members have been continually called into service, and a speed-up study program has meant fewer social meetings.

Until the war is over, the Monogram Club will concentrate its efforts towards fostering at the University athletic teams which will carry on in the spirit of those who have gone before.

FROSH SPORTS

PROCTOR, WARD AND GREENBAUM TALK TO COACH JAMERSON.

*F*OR THE FIRST TIME since the last war freshmen participated in varsity sports at the University. It was strange, at first, to watch them. Yet their performances gave prestige and honor to their class.

A regular freshman football schedule was played, and only one contest was lost. The basketball team gave its two best men to Bill Lange's varsity; still it managed to go through the season undefeated, winning 10 straight games. In swimming there was no freshman competition, but five first year men were good enough to win varsity letters. Other sports—boxing, wrestling, baseball, tennis, track—saw freshmen replace the older students called into service.

No one knows what will happen next year. Most of the freshmen stars of this class have already left school. They're in the army, navy, coast guard, marines, or some other phase of war work. By the time football gets underway this fall they will have scattered all over the war. Many will return after Hitler and Hirohito have been finished. Maybe one, maybe two, perhaps three years. But they'll come back to take up where they left off . . . come back to get an education and participate in the American way of life.

WHO'S WINNIN', GREEN OR TILLET?

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL

COACHED BY Bill Lange, Henry House and Carl Suntheimer, the freshman football team won four out of five games and showed promise of better things for the varsity of the future. The draft and the war, however, has forced many of the stars to leave school, and it's uncertain who will return to the University this fall.

The season opened with a 40 to 6 victory over North Carolina State, followed by a 34 to 6 win over Wake Forest. Davidson was next, going down in defeat, 27 to 0; and the last win was registered against the University of Virginia, the score being 21 to 0.

Duke's yearlings handed the Tar Babies their only loss, a 26 to 9 score on the eve of the varsity game. It was not so much a case of Duke superiority as it was Tar Baby stage fright. Perhaps the most outstanding prospect on the team was Doc Blanchard, fullback.

First Row: DEAN, GIBBS, BRANCH, ORANGER, SMITH, DAVIS, B. ELLIS, BURNEY, LEWIS, CROWLEY.

FRESHMAN BASKETBALL

THE FROSH basketball team proved to be the class in the state winning 10 contests against no losses. Coach of the team was Al Mathes, All-Southern guard and graduate of class of '40. Three victories were registered over Duke by scores of 45 to 42, 55 to 33, and 48 to 36; and two victories were made over N. C. State. Other wins were scored against the high schools of High Point, Durham, Greensboro, Raleigh, and the Children's Home of Lexington. Two freshmen—Ed Lougee and Fritz Nagy—played varsity ball, it being the first time since the last war that first year men have played on varsity teams at Carolina.

First Row: MITCHELL, WILLIAMS, WALTERS, BLACK, ROBINSON, STEVENSON, ANDERSON, WEINSTEIN, THORNE.

FRESHMAN BASEBALL

COACH JIM TATUM's freshman baseball nine showed promise of some fine varsity material in the future as it won seven of ten games. Losses were to N. C. State, 12 to 3; the Medical Detachment, 6th Infantry from Fort Bragg, 12 to 11; and Charlotte High School, 9 to 6. Wins were over N. C. State, 11 to 9; Greensboro High School, 10 to 2; Raleigh High School, 11 to 6; Durham High School, 5 to 2; and Gastonia High School, 4 to 3. Duke's yearlings were defeated twice, 11 to 4 and 10 to 8.

Seated: MASCOTS CARMICHAEL AND CARROLL.
First Row: ROCKER, CLARK, MYERS, COLONES, WHITFIELD, GWALTNEY, WHITE, WHITLOCK.
Second Row: BOWMAN, JAMES, GRESHAM, SEE, FERTER, SMITH, HOLMAN.
Third Row: MUSSLER, HORTER, SHAW, WIDEMAN, WEBB, TATUM, SPARGER, GREEN, JOHNSON.

Kneeling: STICKLE, CAHALL, WARREN, SEIXAS.
Standing: MARVIN, JONES, LUBOW, FAULKNER.

FRESHMAN TENNIS

LED BY VICTOR SEIXAS, JR., ninth ranking player in the country last year, who is now in the Army Air Force, the freshman tennis team won five matches against no defeats. Duke was defeated twice, 4 to 3 and 5 to 0; N. C. State twice, 9 to 0 and 8 to 1; and Maury once, 4 to 3. None of the players on the team are expected to help the varsity this spring.

FRESHMAN SWIMMING

There was no regular freshman swimming team this year because of the Southern Conference ruling permitting first year men to participate in varsity sports. However, there were six freshmen who won varsity numerals and did much to continue Carolina supremacy of Southern Conference swimming. Frosh Ben Ward participated in the 50, 100 and relay; Russell Proctor in the 220 and 440; Jesse Greenbaum in the 50, 100 and both relays; Henry Huse in the 100 and 220; Ira Abrahamson in the backstroke, and Allan Kaufman in the 220 and 440. Ward, Proctor, Greenbaum and Kaufman all placed in the Southern Conference tournament which Carolina won.

Coach Casey helped out the varsity by getting the boys in shape.

First Row: ABRAMSON, SLOMKA, JONES, SMITH, HOBBS.
Second Row: HUSE, BOND, JACOBSON, ALGRANTI, SPIEWAK, HEXNER.
Third Row: BROWN, MAUTSBY, BODMAN, FEREAGUI, PROCTOR, COACH CASEY.
Fourth Row: COOKE, KAUFFMAN, GREENBAUM, WARD, LIGGETT.

First Row: WILLINGHAM, ALLISON, GREENE, TRANT, TILLET, COOPER, HIPPI.
Second Row: FOWLE, HALLET, WHITEHEART, BADAM, SCROLL, TOUMEY, EFIRD.

FRESHMAN WRESTLING

For the second straight year, the Tar Baby wrestlers went through the season undefeated. Victories were registered over V. M. I., 23 to 15; N. C. State, 26 to 6; Greensboro High School, 31 to 3, and V. P. I., 19 to 3. A "B" team, composed of freshmen and reserves from the varsity, defeated a like outfit from Duke, 27 to 3. Two freshmen, Ed Hipp, 155, and Oscar Greene, 145, won starting berths on the varsity team, and both made fine showings in the Southern Conference tournament. Hipp won third place and Greene was second.

FRESHMAN CROSS COUNTRY

ONE OF THE FEW minor sports in which the varsity and freshman teams were not combined, the cross country season rolled past before the new Southern Conference rule permitting the participation of freshmen in varsity athletics was made.

This year's freshman team defeated Duke twice, both times by a score of 20 to 41. The meets with Duke were the only ones of the season.

Freshman runners were: Julian McKenzie, Jim Miller, the Briley twins, Chuck Herty, Clark Burritt, John Bristow and Bud Boyd.

THE FRESHMAN CROSS COUNTRY TEAM.

REVIEW OF TEAMS

FRESHMAN TEAMS for the past year continued to hang up fine records. In 11 contests with Duke, the Tar Babies won eight, losing only in football and twice in track. The tennis, basketball and wrestling outfits were undefeated, and all but one came through the year with a better than fifty-fifty record. All in all, the only thing wrong with the freshman record was the fact that many will never have an opportunity to perform on a Carolina varsity team. Already well over 50 per cent are in the service, and many more will be called by fall.

A BIT OF ACTION FROM FRESHMAN SCRIMMAGE.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

*W*ORKING UNDER DIFFICULTIES of a University at war, the Athletic Council found the problems of carrying on intercollegiate athletics difficult.

As its first major work of the year, the Council was forced to make plans whereby the University's athletic facilities might be made available to the Naval Pre-Flight School and to the Army Air Corps Meteorology unit. Secondly, the enlistment of Coaches Ray Wolf, Bo Shepard, Chuck Erickson, Johnny Morris, Mike Ronman, Jim Tatum, Ham Strayhorn and others caused a serious problem of replacement which was only solved after long hours of painstaking work and serious deliberation.

During the fall quarter, Rice Institute scheduled to play a Homecoming Day football game with Carolina's Tar Heels, was forced to cancel the contest because of transportation difficulties just five days before game time. Working late into the night the Council managed to replace the Rice Owls with Duquesne's highly rated Red Raiders—a stroke of fortune that saved the University considerable embarrassment in the light of the alumni host that had planned to return to the Hill for traditional Homecoming ceremonies.

Finding travel the biggest bottleneck in carrying on war-time intercollegiate athletics, the Council made plans to carry on competition as usual insofar as possible. Thus, the Ration League, made up of nearby schools and service units, was instituted.

The duties of the Council are to appoint coaches, schedule games and contests, award monograms to athletes, budget athletics and carry on an athletic program satisfactory to both alumni and students.

Members of this year's Council were: Coach Bob Fetzer, Director of Athletics; Dean A. W. Hobbs, Chairman of the Council; Sim Nathan, Jr., President of the Carolina Athletic Association; Oliver K. Cornwell, Acting Secretary; Harry D. Wolf, Faculty Representative; Grady Pritchard, Alumni Representative; Tom Devane, Alumni Representative; Dr. Rainy Stanford, Alumni Representative; H. G. Baity, Faculty Representative; Denman Hammond, Monogram Club Representative; Bert Bennett, Student Body Representative.

THE INTRAMURAL DEPARTMENT, like all other departments within the University, found it necessary to make adjustments in program and personnel after the United States entered the war.

At the close of the spring quarter Professor Herman Schnell, for ten years the Director of Intramural Athletics, obtained a leave of absence to join the Army Air Force. In addition, Uncle Sam decided that he needed the capable services of P. A. Lee, Jr., Assistant Director, in July, so the department was left without administrative personnel. These vacancies were filled by the appointment of Walter Rabb, Physical Education Instructor, to the post of Director, and Walter James, Senior Physical Education and Sociology Major, to the position of Assistant Director.

The Intramural Faculty Administrative Board composed of Clyde E. Mullis, Coach Richard Jamerson, and Coach Henry House, of the Physical Education Department, and Dr. William Morgan of the College Infirmary rendered invaluable aid to the two directors in an advisory capacity.

Several problems unique to intramural athletics at Carolina arose during the year. Most outstanding among them was the need for organizing new units of competition to replace the Dormitory units which were lost when the Navy Pre-Flight School moved to the University. Residents of the dormitories were scattered to the residential districts of Chapel Hill making the organization of "natural units" of competition practically impossible. The problem was partially overcome through the joint efforts of the Inter-Town Council and the Intramural Department when they divided the village into four districts and conducted mass meetings in each for the purpose of organizing students within these districts for political, social and intramural activities. Each of these districts had the privilege of having one or more teams represent them in intramural competition. Various All-Star and Independent teams were organized to assimilate other students desiring intramural competition. In recognition of the many new units of competition, it was decided to change the name of the Dormitory League to the Dorm-Town League.

Both the Fraternity and Dorm-Town Leagues were faced with the necessity of replacing key men in the middle of a season and of playing their games during their usual dinner hour. In spite of this and other war born problems, participation and competition maintained the high level which has become traditional at Carolina. This may be attributed in part to the required program of physical education which includes all intramural sports and to the need of the students for physical conditioning and athletic competition.

In recognition of the need for more vigorous competitive sports during wartime, several changes were made in the annual program of intramural sports. Water Goal—a hybrid of water polo, basketball and football—was added. Boxing was reinstated, and badminton replaced table tennis. The Student Entertainment Committee and the Inter-Town Council joined the Intramural Department in sponsoring a Fall Sports Carnival on the night of October 23rd. A varied program of exhibitions and games provided students with the opportunity to either participate or to be a spectator. An informal dance brought the program to a close. The affair appeared to meet with general approval from the student body.

INTRAMURALS

The basketball tournament among the major sports, the water goal, boxing and wrestling tournaments among the intermediate sports, and foul-shooting among the minor sports, provided the most spirited competition.

This summary would not be complete without tribute being paid to the hard working and little recognized managers of the intramural teams and the many student officials. Without their faithful work, conducting a program of intramural athletics at Carolina would be impossible.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

*T*HE WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION worked against tremendous odds this year to keep its intramural program going with as little hitch as possible. Fall quarter found the coeds with neither locker space nor an intramural field, but with hockey, volley ball and tennis tournaments to be run off. Moving hockey to Kenan Stadium during the football team's off-hours, the volley ball players to the old tennis courts, and fighting against rainy weather for the tennis playoffs, the program got underway. Hockey, always the most popular field sport, ran a successful course with the Chi Omega and Kenan dormitory teams copping the winners' plaques, the dormitory all-star team triumphing over the sorority and the All-Carolina girls smashing the Duke coeds, 3 to 0. Volley ball was won by the Alpha Delta Pi sorority, and the tennis plaque by McIver Dormitory whose two members, Beverly Booth and Nancy Deshon, emerged finalists in each of the two leagues.

MARY McCORMIC, President

YATES, BROOKS, VENABLE, ROBINSON, BOOKER, McDONOUGH, MANDEL, JEFFERIS, ROSENBAUM, HICKS.

Winter quarter the coeds moved into the new Woollen addition, and again swimming and basketball took the spotlight. Carolina entered seven members of its swimming team in the Carolina A. A. U. meet held in the Bowman Gray pool and with them took two of the key sports; Fran Turner taking first place in the 50-meter freestyle and Patsy Miller placing second in the 50-meter breaststroke.

Coed basketball now played on the women's own court held one of the most successful seasons at Carolina, with ADPI leading the sorority league and Spencer, the dormitory league. In the annual two league championship game, the sorority girls avenged their defeat in hockey by outpointing the dorm coeds, 26 to 16. Members of the mythical All-Carolina team were: Margaret Harvie, Sara Leatherwood and Mary McCormic, forwards; Lorraine Oldham, Claire Haight and Helen Marie Camp, guards.

“...where credit is due”

THE 1943 YACKETY YACK, having been passed baton-like between a full quartet of editors, has finally crossed the finish line. It rests in your hands—you the individual Tar Heel whose responsibility it is to judge whether or not the race has been fairly and squarely run and whether or not our entry has come home a winner.

Whatever your verdict chances to be, it is only right that a full share of recognition be given to those persons responsible for the painstaking work that has gone into the 53rd edition of the University's yearbook.

First of all, we're taking our humble hat off to Virginia Klages, associate editor,—worker and personality extraordinary whose patience and persistence have dispelled many a dark moment in the book's career. Unbounded credit, too, goes to Karl Bishopric, photography editor, who became acting editor-in-chief during the waning weeks of the spring quarter when we were forced to leave for the armed forces. The YACK would have never seen print had it not been for his constancy. Jim Loeb, managing editor, deserves a round of applause for sacrificing many of his last hours in Chapel Hill to complete the difficult fraternity section.

And there are many others. Scoop Campbell working over the sports copy from his desk at the Pre-Flight School, Dave Cooper filling whenever needed, Tyler Nourse pinching at odd moments, Fred Kanter doing a peach of a job on the social and honorary sections, Bob Levin and Jud Kinburg rounding up the activity section copy, ex-editor Hugh Morton taking off precious days from a short furlough in order to take the important division page pictures and Anne Straub and Martha Urquhart, the "morale building department," lending a willing and able hand when help was needed. Then there were Ardis Kipp and Bill Sharkey who brought order out of chaos from the financial point of view and thereby kept us in the good graces of the P. U. Board.

Nor can we forget the cooperation of Charlotte Engraving's personable Bill Deighton and Lassiter Press' patient Frank Fleming. And little could have been done without the assistance of T. C. Moore at Wootten-Moulton Studios. We are appreciative, too, of our advertisers for their patronage.

We are grateful for the sympathy and understanding of all these many parties concerned and it is our hope that you, the reader, will find in the product of these combined efforts a faithful and authentic picture of the year 1942-43 at Chapel Hill. We have done our level best under trying conditions and are thankful that it has been within our power to continue a Carolina tradition.
